WHAT EMINENT ST. LOUIS PHYSI-CIAN SAYS.

Preventive of Malaria. Golden's Liquid Extract of Beef and Tonic is a very agreeable article of diet, and particularly useful when tonics are required, being tolerated when other forms of animal food are rejected. In Diphtheria, Ague, Malaria, Typhoid, and every depressing disease its use will be attended with great advantage. We have prescribed it with extraordinary success in the cases of M. D. R. A. Vaughn, M. D., Drs. S. L. and J. M. Medel; William Porter, M. D., and many others. Remember the name, Golden's—take no other. Of druggists generally.

TO COUNTRY BELLES.
 Value and usefulness cannot prevent the summer sun from embarrassing your complexion; but "Golden's Sulphur Soap" will specially restore them if daily applied according to directions. The great charm of this article is, that nobody would suspect the effect it produces to be artificial. Nothing can be more natural than the soft velvet texture imparted to the skin. N. C. Critchton, Proprietor.
 It is printed on each packet, without which goods genuine. Sold by druggists and fancy goods dealers.

WHAT WILL TARRANT'S SPLITZER APPROPRIATE CURE?"

Asks the sufferer from a multitude of diseases a answer.—It will remove from the system the active cause of most of the diseases that flesh is heir to. It won't mend a broken limb, nor close a bullet hole; but it may be profitably used in stomachic diseases. It will do no one any harm, and will do much good. Try it and see if it won't suit your case.

THE DAIRY.

—Milk turns sour in thunder storms because during their continuance ozone is generated in the atmosphere. Ozone is oxygen in a state of great density, and oxygen is the great acidifier throughout nature. The excess of oxygen in the atmosphere is due to the milk by the formation of lactic acid.

—One venture in lard cheese to England, sent there as honest goods, did not turn out well, and ought to serve as a warning to all concerned. When the weather came on warm the oil exuding from them was found by simple sense of smell to be nothing but "hog-fat" and the price dropped at once from ten cents a pound to two and a half.

—What is wanted most is a three-pound cheese with no waste, or else a large cheese in a package that could be broken like a tub of butter and leave no waste. This idea looks a little chimerical, but there is no telling what the inventive genius of the country can do until it tries. Then there must be no shams about the business—no large packages, no "hog-fat," no "hog-fat," the people an honest and well-dressed article at a fair price, and without doubt the buyers will be forthcoming.
 —American Dairyman.

Skim-Milk Cheese.
 We gave, in our last, the process of making cheese in small dairies, but this applied to whole-milk cheese; and as we have many readers who may desire to make some cheese as well as butter from the same milk, instruction in this particular process will now be given.
 It requires more skill to make a wholesome skim-milk cheese, because the cream or oil in the milk assists the action of the rennet, and also in the curing of the cheese; but still skim-milk is sometimes so skillfully worked as to produce very good cheese. The rennet is sometimes used in a digestible form. The nitrogenous elements in milk have an important value as food, if they can be preserved in a digestible condition. The difficulty is, in getting a proper action of the rennet to break down the casein. If it remains tough and curd, it requires the stomach of an ostrich to digest it.
 In order to keep the milk sweet for cheese making in warm weather, it must be set by some deep-setting cold method. There are many of these methods, by which, with the aid of cold spring water or ice, the milk will curd perfectly sweet till the cream has risen.
 In the Colby submerging system the morning's milk may be kept over to the next morning, and the night's milk worked with it, as twelve hours is long enough to raise the cream. The rennet must be added at a lower temperature than for whole milk, not allowing the heat to rise above eighty degrees while the curd is forming. This will produce a softer curd. The whole working is to be done at a low temperature. It is salted at the rate of two and three-quarters to three pounds to 100 pounds of curd, or 1,000 pounds of milk—a little more salt than for whole-milk cheese. To make the best skim milk cheese, the curd must be washed sweet, and the sweet butter-milk added to the skim-milk—this will improve the flavor and quality of the cheese.
 In curing, this kind of cheese ought to have a room of even temperature, about seventy-five to eighty degrees.
 It requires at least ten degrees warmer temperature than whole milk cheese; and it is quite essential that the temperature should be even, not changing with the external air. If the ripening can break down its tough, curdy nature, making it mellow and tender, it will find a ready sale.
 Mr. John L. Ellsworth, of Massachusetts, adopted some six or seven years ago, a novel method of making butter and skin cheese. This consisted in heating the milk to be made into cheese, to about 100 degrees, and then adding to it a small quantity of cream, and then cooling it down to about sixty degrees, and setting for the cream to rise about thirty-six hours.
 He churns the cream sweet, and sometimes adds to the churning skimmed milk, and the sweet milk and skimmed milk are mixed with the skimmed milk and made into cheese by the Cheddar method—that is, by drawing the whey early before much acid is developed.
 Heating the milk, it is thought, assists in softening the curd, and makes a soft, pliable curd, and cures about as easily as cheese from whole milk. The butter-milk from the heated milk gives a finer flavor than from milk not heated, and also assists in the curing of the cheese. He also thinks the churned milk promotes the curing.—National Live Stock Journal.

How London Gilt Edge Butter is Made.
 In Dorset dairies the milk stands for twenty-four or thirty-six hours, according to season, and then the cream is skimmed the second time after having a second period; the cream is considered ready for churning immediately after it is skimmed, and during the hot weather is commonly churned every day, and in cold weather the churning is done only on alternate days. To this practice of churning the cream while it is yet quite sweet and fresh is owing, in a great measure, the reputation which Dorset butter has long possessed; the practice, indeed, presupposes the strictest cleanliness with respect to milk pans and other vessels used in the dairy, for without this primary condition the daily churning would be practically valueless. The old fashioned barrel churn with improved beaters is commonly used in Dorset dairies, and after the butter is taken out of the churn, the greatest care is taken to wash out all traces of butter-milk, so as to avoid the light colored streaks that commonly appear in ill-made butter. The coldest and cleanest water that can be obtained is used for this purpose and the butter is repeatedly turned and pressed on a slip of wood. A dairyman whose hand is naturally cold always succeeds best in butter making, all other things being equal.
 It is seldom that the butter is salted in a systematic manner; the dairymen generally guesses the quantity of salt to be used, and an experienced and careful person can guess it with surprising accuracy; it is, however, generally understood that the butter intended for market is more sparingly salted than that intended for home consumption.
 It is clear however, that the Dorset dairymen have got into a better system of better making than most other dairymen in other parts of the country have done, for Dorset butter has a popularity greater than the butter of any other country, and much better made far enough away is sold in London under the name of "Dorset Butter," and the name sells the butter.—Professor Sheldon.

RUMORED.

That Samuel J. Tilden pays $3,000 per year for his clothes.

That he is taking an active hand in state politics.

That he works by secret methods.

That the "Tilden body guards" are re-organized, and are trying to get control of the party machinery.

That Mrs. Zuck Chaudler and daughter has sent $750 to the Michigan sufferers.

That it will take half a million dollars to sustain them during the coming winter.

That Chester A. Arthur has been a sympathizing friend of Garfield during his illness.

That he has shown himself a courteous gentleman.

That he has gained a warm place in the hearts of the people.

That he will make a wise and patriotic president.

That he will find the White House a dreary place.

That he will see that the plumbing is in good order.

That he will see that malaria is out of it before he goes there to stay.

An Entire Success.

It has been proved by the most reliable testimony that Thomas' Electric Oil is an entire success in curing the most inveterate cases of rheumatism, neuralgia, lame back, and wounds of every description.

Rubber Boots and Shoes.

For the past few years the public have been greatly deceived and defrauded in an article that has become to be one of the necessities of life and an article that is indispensable to every man, woman and child's health—we refer to Rubber Boots & Shoes. It is a decided necessity that every person should be thoroughly posted as to the relative value of these goods. There are about ten reliable companies in the United States manufacturing these goods and two other smaller companies, each one of these companies make a second quality rubber, and to avoid detection brand them an assumed name, therein deceiving the public, as it is impossible for a person not engaged in the business to tell a first quality from a second from the looks, feeling or appearance. The second quality are worth from ten to fifteen per cent less than the first in men's and boys' Rubber Boots. The best manufacturers of these goods are Woonsocket and Myer & Co., on Sandie Imitation or light rubber. Over Shoes in general use, articles and wool lined goods. The Goodyear Glove Rubber Co. are making the best quality first class styles in the market. These goods have a larger percentage of rubber in them than any other goods manufactured. Each and every pair of them have the cut of a glove stamped on their bottom. Every person in purchasing these rubber goods should be careful and see they secure the above goods. 21c

Great Oil Boom.

E. Balch, Ill., writes: "That after trying dozens of patent ointments, without relief, for a rheumatic and stiff knee, I feel I have 'struck oil at last' for after using three bottles of Thomas' Electric Oil, I am prepared to say it is the best application I have ever used."

PARISH—Our town was well draped in mourning on receiving the news of President Garfield's death and the mourning was earnest, sincere and deep hearted. Memorial services were held at the churches Sunday.

The Democrats held their caucus last Thursday evening. The delegates are understood to be for Prof. John Cole, of Amboy, for school commissioner. It is understood that he will be the man upon whom Democrats, a large number of Republicans and Greenbackers will unite upon to support for that office upon a non-partisan basis. Prof. Cole is a man of large experience as a school teacher, very successful, and will devote his whole time to the duties of the office.

Some fields of potatoes are quite good and some are very poor. On the whole they are much better than it was expected. Corn is more than half a crop. Buckwheat is just about half a crop.

We think that Dr. Chapman, of Granby, would make a good school commissioner, and he is worthy of the support of laborers and farmers.

NEIGHBORING NEWS.

It is estimated that the loss by fire in the town of Hastings will exceed $25,000.

The Phoenix fair was held over to Friday and said to have been a success financially and otherwise.

The Parish Mirror says the buckwheat crop in that locality will be considerably below the average of former years.

West Monroe was visited by a severe hail and rain storm last Friday. Much damage was done to glass and to fruit and shade trees.

The Sandy Creek News is hereafter to be issued semi-weekly. We are pleased to note this merited prosperity on the part of our neighbor.

Wm. Kitlam, a farmer living in the town of Onondaga was burned to death Monday while endeavoring to extinguish a fire in his building.

Not a death occurred in the town of Parish during the months of August and September. The Parish Mirror says it is something remarkable.

The Ithaca Journal says that many farmers in that vicinity are ploughing up lands sowed to winter wheat, owing to the continued drought which has prevented the germination.

The Syracuse common council considered the application of the Syracuse, Phoenix and Oswego railroad for the right of way through Syracuse at a meeting last Wednesday but laid it over until the next meeting when final action will be taken.

Chief Harvey of the Syracuse police force has been dismissed and detective McCall temporarily substituted. Chief Harvey's removal was made to secure a higher standard of discipline, greater harmony and a more efficient police force.

An attempt at incendiarism was foiled in Oswego last Wednesday evening by the timely discovery of the flames by the night watch. It was started in a blacksmith shop among combustibles in a thickly built portion of the city. Its discovery was, indeed, fortunate.

Anybody can catch a cold now. The trouble is to let go, like the man who caught the bear. We advise our readers to keep a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup handy.

The Effect Already Seen.

The FULTON TIMES already shows that there is a new hand at the bellows. "Oswego Palladium."

Venmor on October.

The Canadian weather prophet made such a lamentable failure in his predictions for July, August and September, that confidence in him is well near destroyed. He is undismayed, however, at the failure of the past, and now stakes his reputation on his predictions for the month of October. He says: "October will enter cold and wet; there will be heavy rains during the first week, with probably snow falls in many sections between the 7th and 10th; cold and wintry weather on the 14th, 15th and 16th; warmer weather on the 18th, 19th and 20th; wet every other day for the rest of the month."

The Law of Kindness.

Is universal; it affects all the human family, all animals, and may be even found in patent medicines. Some are drastic, and the patient is obliged to suffer pain worse than the disease; but in cases of obstinate constipation, dyspepsia, there is no remedy so kind, so gentle in its effects, and yet so satisfactory as Burdock Blood Bitters. Price $1.00, trial size 10 cents.

NEIGHBORING NEWS.

According to the last census there were 37,752 milch cows in Oswego county. Syracuse employs 180 teachers in her public schools and has 800 students. John B. Gough has been engaged to lecture in Sandy Creek some time in December. Egg buyers are steadily gathering up the eggs at 30 cts per dozen in the town of Parish. Potatoes are worth from 65 to 70 cents per bushel in Central Square, so the News says. A rough estimate of the damage by forest fires and drought in central and northern New York is $5,000,000. Editor Charles S. Munger, of the Camden Journal was married Saturday to Miss Estelle M. Rice, of Manlius. Democratic school commissioner nominations: 2d dist, John W. Cole; 3d dist, John F. Hartson. The 1st has not been called yet. A war has broken out between the police force of Utica and the burglars of that city. Thus far the burglars seem to have had the advantage. "Brother" Crane, the evangelist, so well known throughout all this region of country, is very sick at the house of a friend, near Wolcott, Wayne Co. At Cleveland, while Carrie Gadow's uncle was tossing her up to the wall, she fell, striking her head on the floor, producing a dangerous concussion of the brain. She is four years old. Jacob Farrington, of Central Square, while pumping water from his cistern, pumped up two good sized snakes. Alarmed, he proceeded to have the cistern cleaned out and eleven more snakes were found. On Saturday afternoon Thomas G. Alvord was nominated for the Assembly by the First district Republican convention of Onondaga. If elected it will make the fifteenth term for the veteran legislator. The adjourned second district assembly convention convened in the court house at Pulaski, at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Byron D. Holme, of Albion received the nomination leading Dr. Conger, of Phoenix, seven votes. Honorable Mention. Of all remedies on earth that may well claim attention, Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil commands special mention. For wondrous power to cure disease its fame there's none shrouded. Its merits are not in the puff, but are inside the bottle. Rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis, diphtheria, are all cured by Thomas' Electric Oil.

The Sixth Comet.

Intelligence received at the Warner Observatory, Rochester, N. Y., from Bristol, England, states that Prof. W. F. Denning discovered a bright new comet on the 4th inst. It is located in the constellation of Leo, right ascension 9 hours and 22 minutes declination north 16 degrees, daily motion 30 minutes east. This is the sixth comet which has been seen since May 1st, five being new discoveries, all but two of which were first observed by Americans, and it is certainly a high compliment to the industry and skill of American astronomers that they have shown so fine a record. The total amount which Mr. H. H. Warner has given in comet prizes during the past year is $1300 which shows that the interest taken in astronomical affairs in this country is greatly increasing. The early Indians used Mandrake Root to cure certain diseases, but their decoctions from it were something fearful and wonderful. We preserve the principal ingredient in the Little Podophyllin Pills, but disguise its unpleasantness in agreeable companionship. Price 25 cents. For sale by R. E. Phillips. Some lady of this village should take the agency for the popular and useful book, "Practical Housekeeping," issued by the Buckeye Publishing Co., Minneapolis, Minn. It sells rapidly on its merits. Address the publishers for terms. 10c. Wm Smith an old resident of Hannibal died Sunday afternoon. Mr. Smith was born in bondage, and was a slave over 20 years, the property of Mrs. Graham, of Washington, D. C., from whom he escaped and came north. His wife and two grown up children survive him. William has lived in Hannibal over forty years. The following business was transacted before Surrogate Skinner in Fulton last Friday: Estate of Calvin French, late of Granby, deceased. Will duly proved and admitted to probate. Letters testamentary issued to Calvin W. French, executor. Estate of Charles O. West, late of Fulton, deceased. Letters of administration issued to Isabel West, widow of deceased. Estate of Garrett Ward, late of Volney, deceased. Order granted that administratrix sell the real estate of deceased to pay debts. Estate of Beekman G. Fuller, late of Fulton, deceased. Citations issued to heirs and legatees to show cause why the probate of the will of deceased should not be set aside and will declared void. The poor sufferer that has been dosing himself with so called troches and there by upset his stomach without curing the troublesome cough, should take our advice and use at once Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and get well.

A woman in Iowa shot and killed her husband. She was inspired by an angel to do the deed, she said. This shooting per inspiration is becoming too numerous altogether. Why is it these murderers attribute their cowardly attacks to Divine inspiration?

The United States Senate met in extra session Monday and elected Thomas F. Bayard President pro tem by a vote of 24 to 2. In the event of the death or inability of President Arthur, Senator Bayard, democrat, would become President of the United States.

DEMOCRAT U. S. senators have professed by republican tactics and refused to entertain a proposition that would make a republican president of the senate. Senator Edmunds made a point that the democrats were taking advantage of their majority to reap party advantage from the assassination.

The recent decision of the Court of Appeals that a person who has been divorced in this state and prohibited from marrying again may nevertheless contract a legal marriage in another state, and that a child born in this state of such marriage is legitimate, settles a question that has long been in dispute and several times decided the other way in the lower courts.

A FIRE in the Fourth Avenue car stables New York, Monday night owned by W. H. Vanderbilt, destroyed over two million dollars worth of property, one hundred horses perishing in the flames. The fire communicated to a storage building containing furniture belonging to people out of town. Some of the finest furniture in the city was stored there, including a $50,000 painting, the property of Mr. Vanderbilt, all of which burned.

The half breed assembly convention has been adjourned until next Monday to meet in Oswego at same place and time. An effort is being made in the meantime to placate the existing breach in the Republican party in this district but as neither faction appears to be willing to yield an inch, election day will undoubtedly find two Republican candidates in the field struggling for supremacy. For harmony the party of "great moral ideas" commands admiration.

At the ensuing general election, November 8th, six ballots will be voted in this county, endorsed respectively: "state," "assembly," "judiciary," "county," and "school commissioner." The state ballot will contain the names of nominees for senator and the assembly ballot the names of the nominees for member of assembly. The judiciary ballot will contain the name of the nominees for supreme court judges. The ballot endorsed county will contain only the name of the candidates for county officers. The ballot endorsed school commissioner will contain the name of the nominee for school commissioner.

FOURTEENTH YEAR.

A Wedding in Wyoming.

Camping near the town, we secured our stock and then went in. Hating the loading store, I introduced myself to Mr. Stiles, one of the proprietors and the postmaster.

"It is now half-past 2 and at 3 there's to be a wedding down the street at Jonas Burton's. Old Jones is a rough old coon that we elected Justice of the Peace about a month ago, and as this will be his first attempt at a marriage, I think we will see some fun. Come and go down with me."

We went to the old "Squire's" cabin. We found him pouring over a large volume of the statutes of Wyoming, sweating like a horse and looking terribly anxious. After greeting us he said:

"Stiles, the damned gals that got up these 'yer laws hadn't gumption enough to last 'em over night. I've run through the blamed book a half a dozen times, an' can't find a dod dashed word about matrimony, or how the hitchin' process is proceeded. I've just got to put the clamps on this couple, hit or miss, an' if I don't yoke 'em up legal I can't help it."

"Oh!" said Stiles, "just do the best you can. Any kind of a ceremony 'll do in this country, for people'll never question the legality of the thing. I'll post you as well as I can."

Stiles then explained to him about how he should proceed, and the old man finally thought he could worry through in tolerable shape. Ere long the couple appeared, followed by a crowd of the citizens of the camp. The candidates stood up before the "Squire," who began:

"Feller citizens, this 'yar man an' this 'yar woman have appeared before the court to be hitched in the legal bands of wedlock. If any galoot in the mob know of anything that mout block the game of took to a higher court, let him now tout his bezon, or else keep his jaw to himself now and forevermore.

All in favor of the 'em proceedin' as authorized by the law, say 'Amen.'"

Everybody said "Amen."

"Contrary, 'no.'"

"Nobody said 'no.'"

"The motion's carried unanimously, an' the Court rules that they be hitched to the prevent the tryin' of the case. Grip your fins."

The candidates joined hands. "Amen," cried the crowd, and the old man, with a look of satisfaction, said: "You're hitched now, an' you solemnly swear that you'll be true to each other in sickness an' in health, in good times an' in bad, till death

do you part. You'll love 'er, an' provide for 'er, an' treat 'er squar an' white, accordin' to the rules an'

regulations set down to govern such cases in the laws of the United States, so help you

God!"

"Amen, 'er, I do, 'er."

"That fixes you and o' the bargain.

Mandy Thomas, do you solemnly swear that you'll hang on to Anna for all comin' time, that you'll love her in sickness an' in

"That fixes you and o' the bargain.

Shopping with a Woman.

Did you ever go shopping with a woman?

It is very interesting to a man. It does not make much difference what is to be purchased, the process is about the same. For instance, Mrs. Buyer wants a small rug, so she takes Mr. Buyer along as stinkholder, so to speak. Mrs. B., having been placed in charge of a gentlemanly clerk, (it is singular, but they are all gentlemanly—in the newspapers, and this clerk has got to have a few shawls, and states that she would like to see some rugs. The g. c., affected more or less, by the affable appearance of his customer, smiles a waxed-mustacheand-hair-parted-in-the-middle smile, and proceeds to cover the floor with Turkish rugs of gorgeous dye and beautiful to behold. Mrs. B. examines prices, and ex-claims on their beauty, and then remarks, with a sigh, that she wanted something not quite so expensive. Then the English feel beauties are exhibited, and the same program goes through. Mrs. B. quickly suggests that she would like to look at the illustrated stuff, and several bolts of linen of various sizes, styles and patterns are spread out to be examined and priced. All this time Mr. B. stands around in awe and astonishment, noting the changes on the countenance of the clerk, the glimmer of hope and despair, as Mrs. B.'s eyes notes some matting and she goes off at a tangent to make a raid on it. After satisfying herself as to the price of straw, and making a mental calculation of the effect of the drouth, and failure of crops on prices, she innocently wonders whether there are any cheap carpet rugs in stock, and the g. c., goes like a martyr to the stake, to lay out the first carpet rug then on the other, until both are tired, brightens up at this thinking that at last the end is reached, but, vain hope, his heart sinks within him as he sees her switch off to a pile of remnants. These she examines and prices, debates whether a rug made of certain pieces would not be pretty, and finally concludes that she will go elsewhere, and if she don't get what she wants she may come back and buy one of these pieces. Then she retreats with Mr. B., leaving the woe-begone clerk the picture of de-lit.

"You worried that clerk out, anyway," remarked Mr. B., as they moved away.

"Oh, no, I didn't," she replied, "they have to get used to that."

"But why didn't you say something?"

"Why, I didn't see anything that suited me. I don't know that I shall get a rug any way," and Mrs. B. stopped at another place to price linen, while Mr. B. mentally repeated: "First in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of her countrymen."

Heat Without Fire.

A machine has been invented in Boston for generating heat without fire. It is simply an iron cylinder about a foot long and a foot in diameter. The bottom of the cylinder is a hardened plate upon which another plate of the same diameter turns, the pressure being regulated by a screw, according to the power that is to be applied and the amount of heat desired. All of the space not taken up by the wheel and shaft is filled with water. As soon as the wheel is set in motion the water is brought up to a high temperature and the cylinder becomes a stove, which radiates heat from the whole of its exterior surface. Of course this machine can only be used in buildings where there is steam power that can be availed of to run the friction wheel. There is entire security against accident by fire, which is a strong point in favor of the friction heater.

NOVEMBER.

By Julia Dunn.
Fie upon thee, November, thou dost
The air of thy young sister, thou hast stolen The wistful smile of May to grace thy lip, And April's rare capricious loveliness Thou'rt trying to put on! Dost thou not know Such freaks do not become thee? Thou shouldst Be a staid and sober matron, quietly Laying aside the follies of thy youth, And robing thee in that calm dignity Meet for the handmaid of the dying year.
But, ah! thou art a seductive coquette, although The frost of age is on thee! Thou dost sport With every idle breeze that wafts thee, And toy and frolic with the aged leaves That flutter round thee. Unto every low, Soft murmur of the brooklet, thou dost lend A willing ear; and crowing thy pale brow With a bright coronet that thou hast woven Of the airy sunbeams summer has left behind.
Thou dost seem to be joyously, and strive To answer in a cadence clear and sweet As spring's first whisper! In the valley now The flowers have faded, and the singing-birds Greet thee no longer when thou wanderest Through the dim forest; and yet thou dost Smile, and skip as lightly 'er the withered grass, As if thou hadst not decked thee in the robes That thy dead sisters wear in festal hours!

THE PHOTOGRAPH MYSTERY.

BY CLARENCE F. BULLER.

The last object viewed in life is said to be so impressed upon the retina of the eye that it can be photographed therefrom after death. When this theory was first broached an occasional effort was made to test its accuracy as a means of identifying murderers and the most extraordinary of the cases forms the ground work of the present story.

In the summer of 18—, a young physician named Edwin Stone commenced practice in a certain village not a great way from New York City. In saying that he "commenced practice," I mean that he seriously intended to do so as soon as the patients were forthcoming. In his medical studies he had made a specialty of diseases of the eye, but as there is nothing of any account for an oculist to do in a small village, he made a virtue of necessity and put up his shingle as a physician merely.

He invested all the money he had in the world in a cheap little cottage, which he selected not for its business advantages, but because it was the pink of perfection in all other respects. For the fact was, he was engaged to be married as soon as his circumstances would admit. His affianced wife was Ella Thorne, the daughter of the village lawyer; and poor as Edwin Stone he would not have exchanged her silver voice for a golden dove.

When he first took possession, he only furnished the two lower rooms in the house —the front one being his office and the rear one his bedroom. The visits of patients were like those of angels, few and far between; but whenever he had an extra run of luck, he and Ella would have a great time shopping together, in order to furnish the house by degrees, and have it in readiness when the auspicious moment arrived.

To keep up appearances—an indispen-sible thing in the world—the doctor was obliged to keep some one to take charge of the office and make himself generally useful. In accordance with an inveterate custom the doctor got the largest boy he could obtain for the money, and this happened to be a dogged fellow, who hired out to the doctor as a near approach to doing nothing at all.

Indeed, he had such a hang dog look that he enjoyed the reputation of having a "donkey in him as large as a woodchuck." Of course, the wages that Seth, as he was called, received from the doctor was not sufficient to keep body and soul together, and as he wrote an excellent hand, two birds were killed with one stone by lawyer Thorne's giving him occasional employment as a copy boy.

The summer passed away—Autumn came and went—and even winter brought no improvement in Edwin's prospects; and the poor fellow often wondered whether his flowering hopes would share the fate of everything else that summer had brought forth.

Just at this time, a wealthy man of color offered a large sum of money for the best treatise on the subject alluded to in the commencement of this article. Being thoroughly conversant with everything pertaining to that subject, Edwin Stone applied himself to the task like an enthusiast.

He did this not so much for the prize itself as to what lay beyond it; for he saw in fancy a ruddy flame in his dusty old fire place, and beside it sat Ella Thorne with a child on her knee as much like her as it is possible for any but to be like a flower. And although it was but an imaginary flame, it lent a new sparkle to his eye, as he sat up night after night engaged in that labor of love.

As the work progressed, he read it aloud to Ella, and they laid a thousand foolish plans regarding the expenditure of the money when he obtained it. So much was to be invested in an ash of rose wedding dress; so much in a perfect rainbow of a carpet for the parlor; so much for the very yellowest canary obtainable for the sum specified; and to cap the climax, Edwin added, with an effort to be funny, "We will buy that gaudy picture of the 'good Samaritan' in Wellington boots and swallowtail coat, that we saw in the shop window the other day."

No telegraph ever saw so many stars in heaven as the eye of Faith, and neither Edwin nor Ella ever entertained the possibility of a failure to secure the prize. But the manuscript had been forwarded they waited with their hearts in their mouths for the day upon which the name of the successful competitor was announced.

eyes a carrier pigeon, bearing the intelligence they so impatiently awaited. At length the momentous period arrived, and the result justified their sanguine expectations; Edwin was declared entitled to the prize, and was duly notified to appear forthwith, and receive the amount in hard cash.

The two were almost beside themselves with joy, and the wedding day was fixed at once. Edwin lost no time in securing the money, but like most young doctors he had no bank account; so on returning home with the amount late at night he took the precaution to fasten it in a belt about his waist. After dismissing Seth, who was waiting for his return, Edwin sat down by his bedroom fire, and was soon lost in one of those reveries where everything is color de rose. Oton when he sat beside Ella in church, the sun would suddenly strike through the painted window, and make the gloomy aisle burst into blossom with rubies and emeralds; and thus the enchanted vision of the future appeared to Edwin Stone on that memorable night. There was a brook just back of the cottage, but winter had hid his icy fingers on its warbling lips—consequently the gurgling sound that broke the silence of midnight could not have proceeded from that.

soon ceased, and was succeeded by the prolonged howl of a dog in the distance—that peculiar howl by which the superstitious know that some one is dying in the village.

The next morning Seth was on his way to the office as usual, when he encountered lawyer Thorne, who was just starting out for his morning walk.

"I guess we are going to have a bright day," said he to Seth.

"It may be," replied the latter, "but it will be a windy one, if that red sky is any sign."

The lawyer had an eye like a lynx, but for the life of him, he could not discover the slightest tinge of red in the heavens.

"By the way," said he, "as you have finished all but a page or two of the last job, it will take you but a moment or two to do it now."

Seth was at first disinclined to comply, but he finally went in, and sat down with pen in hand waiting for the ink, which the lawyer brought from his own desk in an aluminum room.

Before commencing, Seth drew his hand across his eyes, as if to brush off something that blurred his sight; and he had severely written the first word, before he started up,
and angrily exclaimed:

"I didn't ask you for red ink!"

The ink was as black as the ace of spades,
and this being Seth's second optical delusion that morning, the lawyer advised him to defer the copying for a short time. Seth thereupon departed for the doctor's office, and shortly after came rushing back to announce that he had found Edwin Stone with a hushlet imbedded in his skull.

In consequence of his suspicious conduct
at Lawyer Thorne's, Seth was promptly arrested and as red tape was scarce in those days he was speedily brought to trial.

Directly after the murder, it transpired that the prize for the treatise was offered by a man who knew the peculiar situation in which Edwin Stone and Ella were placed,
and in offering that prize he accomplished the double purpose of advancing the interests of science and of rendering pecuniary assistance in a delicate way. Next to Ella no one was so horrified by the murder as this person, for, as it was followed
the indirect cause of the tragedy.

So in order to make all amends in his power he devoted all his energies to the procurement of the suspected man. Being an enthusiast in regard to the theory on which poor Stone had written, he determined to reduce it into practice as a means of conviction. He therefore employed one of the most experienced photographers in New York city to photograph the eye of the murdered man and thus obtain the portrait of the murderer.

On the day of trial the photograph so taken was brought into court in a sealed envelope, and after the preliminary proof had been submitted, the photograph was duly exhibited to the jury.

The foreman was a weather beaten old trapper who would have looked a wild cat in the eye with perfect composure, but he no sooner saw the photograph than he covered his face with his horny hands and uttered a cry of horror that will echo in the ears that heard it until it is shut out by the coffin lid.

It was the photograph of Ella Thorne!
Every one saw in the wild excitement that ensued that it would be useless to prosecute the matter further, and the prisoner was straightway discharged from custody;
but of course, no one was so devoid of reason as to suspect Ella Thorne of complicity in the crime. Years passed, and the inhabitants of the village began to lose faith in the proverb that "murder will out," when Ella, who had devoted herself to deeds of charity since that awful period, was summoned to the bedside of Seth, who had been mortally wounded in a drunken brawl. On her arrival the dying wretch spoke as follows, although some of the words gushed out with a mouthful of blood:

"There is not a creeping thing on God's earth that doesn't see the day it wished for wings; but no one ever had the charity to suppose that I ever wanted to be better than I was. Ever since I first saw you, I have turned my back on God to worship the original of this portrait!"

Here he fumbled under the bed clothes for a moment, and also recoiled from him with horror as he produced her own miniature that she had given Edwin Stone, and which was now smeared with his blood.

Having exhibited this, Seth now proceeded with his recital.

"Mine was a nature that could stand any number of kicks, when a single kind word would have been too much for me. But I didn't get it—so let that pass. Edwin Stone was superior to me in everything but in love for you and when he came between us, like a snake, I resolved to send him to the only place where I could meet him on equal terms. That place was the grave."

"A dying bed is no place for hypocrisy, and I admit that the money was one incentive to the murder; but when I saw him going at this miniature just as I struck him down, I drove the hatchet in an instant, two deeper as I thought of his love for you."

"I accented that parrot with the money, and I want no other man to wear it next his heart, as I often did at night when there were no curious eyes about; so you are welcome to it, and all the more so because it has the blood of Edwin Stone upon it."

I had no remorse for what I did, although everything has looked red to me since his blood spurted in my eyes; and even those black clouds in yonder orion sky, look like vultures on a field of blood!"

As he pointed upward he felt back dead;
but the mystery connected with the photograph was solved; for the photograph from the dead man's eye was the one it had yielded in Ella's miniature; an instant before

Polishing Finger Nails.

A New York letter to the Cincinnati Enquirer says: "When my time came I sat in a row with five other ladies, all in the easiest of arm chairs, and with damask capkins in our laps. Finger bowls of stained glass on plates of painted French china, filled with tepid water, perfumed and containing an acid to soften the skin, were given us, and solemnly we sat and soaked our finger nails for fifteen minutes. At the end of that time an 'operator' on a low stool seated herself before me, dried one hand, posed it on a pink satin cushion, and with a fine steel instrument quickly scraped away the soft skin round the nail, then she filed it into a point at the top and clipped the sides with sharp scissors, then she rubbed a red salve, called rosoline, over it and it wiped off and proceeded to polish with the diamond powder, using the palm of her hand, until the nail fairly glittered, and finally warm water, civille soap and a soft brush left it clean, smooth and shining."

and in half an hour, for the sum of $1.50 was finished, and the result was too quick and brilliant weapons of defense so sharp and pointed as to suggest the advantages of peace. The fashion of wearing these long and pointed nails has become so exaggerated that it necessitates long-fingered gloves and extreme care to prevent their breaking off."

and angrily exclaimed:

and this being Seth's second optical delu-
sion that morning, the lawyer advised him
and shortly after came rushing back to
with a hushlet imbedded in his skull.

rested and as red tape was scarce in those

which Edwin Stone and Ella were placed,
and in offering that prize he accomplished
assistance in a delicate way. Next to Ella
no one was so horrified by the murder
the indirect cause of the tragedy.

of the murderer.

en was brought into court in a sealed en-

heard it until it is shut out by the coffin lid.

It was the photograph of Ella Thorne!
Every one saw in the wild excitement that
straightway discharged from custody;
but of course, no one was so devoid of reason
as to suspect Ella Thorne of complicity
in the crime. Years passed, and the inhab-
her arrival the dying wretch spoke as fol-
out with a mouthful of blood:

"There is not a creeping thing on God's earth that doesn't see the day it wished for
I was. Ever since I first saw you, I have

which was now smeared with his blood.

with his recital.

"A dying bed is no place for hypocrisy,
and I admit that the money was one incen-
down, I drove the hatchet in an instant, two
deeper as I thought of his love for you."

everything has looked red to me since his

yielded in Ella's miniature; an instant before
it had closed for ever.

A good Baptist clergyman of Bergen, N.
Y., a strong temperance man, suffered with kidney trouble, neuralgia, and dizziness almost to blindness, over two years after he was told that Hop Bitters would cure him, because he was afraid of and prejudiced against "Bitters." Since his cure he says none need fear but trust in Hop Bitters.

Polishing Finger Nails.

Enquirer says: "When my time came I
ed glass on plates of painted French china,
with a fine steel instrument quickly scrap-
she filed it into a point at the top and clip-

was finished, and the result was too quick

Magie in the Nineteenth Century.

N. McRea, Wybridge, Ontario, writes: "I have sold large quantities of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil; it is used for colds, sore throat, croup, etc., and in fact for many afflictions of the throat it works like magic. It is a sure cure for burns, wounds and bruises."

Virgine Acknowledged.

Mrs. In Maliboland, Albany, N. Y., writes: "For several years I have suffered from offering biliary headaches, constipation, dyspepsia, and complaints peculiar to my sex. Since using your Burdock Blood Bitters I am entirely relieved." Price $1, trial size 10 cents.

eyes a carrier pigeon, bearing the intel-
the result justified their sanguine expecta-
with, and receive the amount in hard cash.

hid his icy fingers on its warbling lips—
ceeded from that.

village.

The next morning Seth was on his way
to the office as usual, when he encountered
for his morning walk.

"I guess we are going to have a bright
day," said he to Seth.

sign."

the slightest tinge of red in the heavens.

to do it now."

Seth was at first disinclined to comply,
aluminum room.

across his eyes, as if to brush off something that blurred his sight; and he had severely
written the first word, before he started up,
and angrily exclaimed:

and this being Seth's second optical delu-

In a few instances participants so far forgot themselves as to claim the license of "Hallow E'en" to pelt houses with stones.

A DOCTOR HABBED.

A Man Who has made Fulton His Headquarters Arrested for Burglary—A Bad Man.

During the latter part of May a man made his appearance in Fulton giving his name as Dr. Wade travelling from house to house selling medicines possessed of wonderful curative properties known only to himself he said, and imparted to him by a defunct Indian chief—a near relative of Pocahontas. He would relate his story with wonderful precision, and the boldness and assurance accompanying his recommendations and the heads of prominent families he casually referred to as ready to testify to his genuineness and reliability as a licensed practitioner, succeeded in gaining for him a foothold in places where a good tongue is a passport more potent than gold.

Dr. Wade alias Piersen alias Alberto Walrado has been under the strict surveillance of a Fulton officer for some time, but his actions were at no time such as would warrant his arrest.

This Times noticed last week the burglary at the house of Martin Ward in North Granby. This Dr. Wade was arrested and brought before Justice Parker of Oswego Falls but discharged for want of positive evidence. Ward read of the Oswego Palladium a description of a man named Piersen wanted in Newark, N. Y. for burglarizing the residence of a well known citizen, and communicated with chief Baker in Oswego that he thought Mr. Piersen and Wade were the same individual. Chief Baker acting under Mr. Ward's suggestion came to Fulton Monday, in the meantime notifying the Newark authorities, and captured the daring rogue as he was riding leisurely up Onondaga street in a hired rig. He was taken to the Oswego jail for the purpose of going out to Niagara to visit a patient.

He was taken to Oswego and there acknowledged the burglary charged at Newark saying he had pawned the jewelry in Syracuse, the pawn tickets being found upon his person. He stoutly denied the Ward burglary but, circumstances are dead against him. Previous to the Newark burglary, Wade went to Rochester, and, by representing himself to be a married man with a sick wife, and upon producing a forged letter of recommendation from a man in Clyde named Jenkins, he got a girl about twelve years old named May Bell, from a Rochester asylum. He took her to Wolcott and left her with a family there, where she took the name of Mabel Piersen. The girl was recovered by the Rochester authorities a short time after and taken back by them.

The doctor also palmed himself off in Fulton for a U. S. secret service detective, and had a quantity of letter heads like the following printed to facilitate his business.

ALBERTO WALRADO,
U. S. DEPARTMENT,
JUNE 30, 1872.

P. O. Box 423
Washington, D. C., 188

He lodged at the Broadway house, in Oswego Falls, and also at a private residence in the same village but he has not been of any crookedness in that direction. He was taken to Newark yesterday.

The wily doctor will be recalled to many Fulton people as we picture him: He was a tall, dark featured man, wearing black sideburns and attired in dark clothing, with a loosely fitting Prince Albert coat, he was slightly bent, and generally accompanied upon his walks by a small leather grip sack and cane. He looked like a man of about forty. When passing a person he would cast a quick furtive glance and thereby one was usually attracted to him.

The second grand masquerade ball of the Oswego Falls Cricket Club and Reading Room will be held at Nichols hall Tuesday evening November 23d, 1881. Committee of arrangements: G. E. Smiddy, T. Lambert, G. Clark, W. Guile, Floor managers, E. DeRusha, C. C. Hewes, G. Clark, W. Robertson, T. Carr, F. Summerville. Reception committee, H. Bachus, F. Willard, M. Connors. Carriage committee, T. Lambert, W. Kelley, M. Ellis.

The die is cast! Yesterday the Hon. Joseph Mason favorably endorsed and forwarded to the President of the United States the petition of Mr. N. H. Gilbert for postmaster of the village of Fulton. Mr. Gilbert's appointment may be looked for at any time between now and the 10th inst. He cannot be confirmed until Congress convenes in December but there need be no uneasiness regarding this formality. It has been a long and tiresome struggle for the various applicants and their friends and the result should be accepted in a friendly spirit by all.

Rev. J. S. Riggs delivered the second of a series of lectures to young men at the Presbyterian church, Sunday evening, to a large audience, his subject being "Young men in business." Mr. Riggs is an original and earnest thinker and reveals his thoroughness in the practical and logical reasoning with which young men are advised and admonished to do right and fear not. Another thing he urged, is character in business. "The darkest day," said Horace Greeley, "a young man ever saw, was when he gained his first dollar without squarely earning it." Integrity of character is worth more than money. He closed by connecting the Christian business man to set a good example before the world. Young men he said: "Act well your part for here the honor lies."

Mr. Riggs' ability as an orator satisfied him in giving full force to the salient points enunciated, and every young man in Fulton will be well remunerated by listening to one of his lectures.

H. Rosamyn Webster and wife of Warsaw N. Y., are guests of Mrs. Edith Corrie. Miss Belle McCulloch of Seneca Hill is also being entertained by the same lady.

Our Photographer Beals, attended the reunion of the 121st and 152d regiments N. Y. S. V., which was held at Richfield Springs, the 13th and 14th. The women being asked there he was so fortunate as to secure the services of one of their best artists, Mr. Geo. Young, who will assist in beautifying the work at Beals's gallery.

Burned to Death.

Two children of Thomas Sweeney, of Oswego Falls, were deprived of their life by kerosene last Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Sweeney lives on what is known as the "pest bed" road in the west end of the village and the family was composed of the father, mother and five children. Mr. Sweeney and the eldest child are employed in the Oswego Falls factory. Mrs. Sweeney had business in Fulton and left the four children Daniel aged 10, Patrick 7, Annie 4, and a little baby Johnnie aged eighteen months alone, as she had often done before, trusting to their good behavior until she returned.

Mrs. Sweeney was not long absent before Daniel thought he would fan the fire up a little and accordingly procured a stick and thrusting it into a kerosene can and then into the stove where coals were plenty but partially hidden under ashes. This risky experiment was repeated until the stick was thrust into the can with a coal clinging to it, which caused it to burst scattering the blazing oil over the furniture and floor frightening the childish occupants almost to a frenzy. Up to this time Johnnie was lying quietly in bed where his mother had thoughtfully cared for him before leaving home. But the smoke and noise attracted his attention and he somehow crawled out of bed, out into the fire and received burns and injuries from which he died, and his sister Annie received her fatal injuries in a heroic attempt to extricate little Johnnie from the flames. Daniel and Patrick escaped serious harm. Annie and Johnnie were burned horribly about their bodies and lingered along until 10 p. m., when Johnnie died, and in about twenty minutes after Annie ceased to breathe.

The fire was extinguished by the two boys Daniel and Patrick, before any assistance was summoned, and by their wonderful presence of mind averted further calamity. Funeral services were held from the house Friday, at 3 p. m.

It has been stated in several papers that the boy Johnnie was left by his mother tied in a high chair, and in that condition was burned to death. This Mrs. Sweeney asks us to correct, and the version as given in THE TIMES is direct from the lips of the sorrowing mother.

Many people are attracted to the Free Methodist chapel every Sunday to listen to Rev. A. Smith, the blind preacher. For the past two years the little band of worshippers here, pretty well broken up through the bickering and jealousy of members and pastors and a blind man has been sent among them to try and cement the fractious in the unity of brotherly love. Mr. Smith is totally blind and his devoted wife accompanies him too and from the chapel, reads the hymns, bible lessons, church notices etc., and during prayer or class meetings informs him who is speaking that he may call them by name and address according to pastoral duties. Mr. Smith is not eloquent in his discourses, but his earnestness as he stands in the pulpit pleading with uplifted hand is a picture beautiful and full of sympathy, and for a man who has been subjected to considerable poverty, poverty of late and is making an effort to discover the perpetrators.

At a meeting of the Common Council of the city of Syracuse, held in that city Monday evening, a resolution granting the right of way to the proposed Syracuse, Phoenix and Oswego railroad was brought up and discussed. Gentlemen from Phoenix were present and advocated favorable and immediate action. Hon. Dennis McCarthy was present and spoke in favor of granting the request and said the new road would be objectionable to no one except the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad company and thought if the Common Council took into consideration the jealousies of rival corporations we would be obliged to go back many years in civilization. The resolution was tabled for two weeks. The opening of this road will greatly benefit Fulton and give us a rival route to Syracuse.

Soundings are to be made immediately as a preparatory step to putting the fishways in the dams between Oswego and Fulton. If the weather is favorable and high water delayed for a short time, it is believed the work will be completed this fall.

J. H. Case & Co. and George Kellogg of Fulton have nearly completed their contract for harbor work at this port this season. Case & Co. have the contract on the West side and Mr. Kellogg on the east side. Twenty-one crabs, 715ft, have been sunk, which is the greatest number in any one season since the pier work was commenced. The dredging of the approach to the harbor has been done from a point near the Northwest corner elevator to the mouth of the harbor, making a channel 150 feet wide with a depth of seventeen feet. This job is finished. The work here has been in charge of L. T. Richardson of Fulton, who has had great experience in public works, and it is said to be the best job yet done on our harbor improvements. [Oswego Palladium]

We find the following in a Fallers Seminary catalogue of 1885:

"Fulton, the seat of 'The Fallers Seminary of the Black River Conference,' is pleasantly situated on the Oswego river at the Falls, and has a moral, intelligent and enterprising population of about 4,600."

The official census reports of 1881 give Fulton a population of 3,941, or about 4,000. Twenty-six years has not been sufficient to arouse Fulton from its lethargy, and if it was not for the activity of our sister village of Oswego Falls, we would be almost unheard of.

Whereas, my wife Ida has left my bed and board without just cause or provocation I hereby warn all persons against harboring or trusting her on my account, as I shall pay no bills of her contracting.

The annual convention of the Oswego county Sunday schools commenced at 7:30 p. m. at the Baptist church in this village last evening. The church was well filled. The convention was opened by Hon. O. J. Harmon, who made a few remarks. The meeting sang, "We need thee every hour." A prayer was made and a portion of Scripture read. A few more remarks by Mr. Harmon, then the hymn "Nearer my God to Thee." Mr. Butler of Syracuse delivered an address treating on Sunday school work. Remarks were made Rev. L. Golden and others on Sunday school work. The convention met again this morning at 10 a. m.

A Boiler Explodes With Terrible Results.

About 11 o'clock Friday forenoon, a terrible accident occurred at Martville, Cayuga county, about four miles southwest of Hannibal, by the explosion of the boiler to a steam thrashing machine, resulting in the death of Frank Millman, aged 35 years, residing about half a mile north of Martville, and badly injuring about eight other persons, viz Frank Timerson, residing about 1 1/2 miles south of Martville, injured in the abdomen and the lower part of the body and has since died; George Carter, residing in Victory, 45 years old, right arm broken and will have to be amputated; Michael Mara-beck, aged 60 years, leg broken and scalded about the face; Walter Mosher, aged 10 years, right leg broken and head injured, not fatal; Washington Mosher, aged 8 years, brother to Walter, skull fractured and face scalded about six inches long; James Dodge 45 scalded, not fatal; John Cull, about 10 years old, years old, scalded about the face and head; David Danell, scalded about the head. The accident occurred near a blacksmith shop where the machine stopped for some slight repairs about ten minutes before the explosion. Timerson, Carter and Dodge were with the machine, and were on their way to George Carr's to do some thrashing. The machine not arriving at Carr's as soon as was expected, Millman went to the village to learn the cause of the delay and was standing at the time of the explosion about ten feet from the engine. His clothing was entirely blown from his person. He died two hours after the accident. Danell, Mara-beck and the lady, with several others were looking at the machine when the explosion took place. The machine was a steam oil propelled, and had been used by Mr. Timerson about three years. The explosion is supposed to have been caused by a short supply of water in the boiler, but at this time nothing definite is known.

At the time of the explosion the thrasher was standing in front of the grist mill of A. Cosco, formerly of Fulton, and a flying piece of boiler plate two feet square narrowly missed several George Cosco.

The Fulton Lyceum.

This village has long felt the want of some society, the object of which should be to hold debates on subjects of interest, political, literary or scientific and to afford pleasure in parliamentary usages. With a view to meet this want a preliminary meeting was held two weeks ago, at which a committee was appointed to draw up a constitution and by-laws for such a society. Last Friday evening a second meeting was held at the office of Henry E. Nichols to hear the report of this committee and to organize the society. The meeting was called to order and Mr. H. E. Nichols elected chairman. Mr. E. A. Redhead on behalf of the committee, presented the report which they had drawn up, and after some discussion the society was organized on the basis which they had suggested under the name of the "Fulton Lyceum."

Meetings will be held every Friday evening, at which some topic of interest will be brought forward for debate, and every member will be expected in his turn to start some subject for discussion.

The first debate will take place on Friday evening November 11th; when the subject under debate will be:—"That immigration to this country should continue to be encouraged." Mr. S. Lyovock will take the affirmative side and Mr. E. A. Redhead will lead off the opposition. The meeting will be held at the office of Henry E. Nichols and will commence at 7:30 p. m.

JOHN BACHUS Hon Sec.

Mr. M. B. Schenck and family contemplate taking up their residence in Syracuse. Mr. Schenck will enter quite extensively into the manufacturing business. While we regret to lose so valuable a citizen we are pleased to note that the change is solely to facilitate the manufacture of his patent stove truck.

Complaint is made to THE TIMES that the village park is being used as a pasture by tramp cows and horses and also that firearms are promiscuously discharged at all times of the day by boys and young men. There is a village ordinance prohibiting all this and this notice may serve as a warning.

Caroline Howe died at her residence on Cayuga street, between 5th and 6th, Saturday Oct. 29th at the advanced age of 72. Funeral services were held from the same place Monday at 3 p. m.

Dr. F. G. Barnes and family of this village are making preparations to remove to Syracuse. Dr. Barnes has had an extensive practice in this vicinity and removes to a more remunerative field of labor.

Grand Display of China and Glassware. Silver, China, Glass, and other articles. Furniture, Linens, and other goods. From the East and China. Ware selling lower than ever.

Mr. McCarthy, the popular China ware merchant, has been making great preparations for fall and winter trade in his extensive line of goods throughout all departments of his great China, glass and silver ware establishment, at Oswego, N. Y. Mr. McCarthy's store is now open to place before the public the largest assortment of the latest novelties in choice artistic pottery, glass and silver as well as a complete stock of staple goods in crockery, China, glass ware, lamps, silver ware, house furnishing goods, &c., at the very lowest prices, and always below prices that you can find the same quality of goods elsewhere.

The people take great pride in McCarthy's mammoth establishment, which is best shown by their liberal patronage and the fact that their visitors are always shown through McCarthy's china hall. This kindly treatment by our people is fully appreciated by the proprietor, who has endeavored to establish in Oswego the finest china ware establishment to be found in Central New York.

His permanent improvements with each succeeding year for the past ten have placed McCarthy's China Hall equal with any in New York State, with a larger variety of fine goods than in any adjoining city. We advise all who are in want of anything in china ware line to visit McCarthy's—from city, country and all adjoining villages, where you will find the largest as well as the lowest prices, fair dealing and prompt attention. Continued prosperity, and permanent success is the will of the TIMES, for McCarthy's china hall.

The Life-Saving Service.

There is no department of the government service that so strongly appeals to the sympathy of the public as the life saving service, but the government does not enjoy the monopoly of this beneficent work. Some of it is done nearer home than we often think. The changes of the weather require the utmost care in respect to clothing and they who regard the public welfare by supplying good warm clothing at the least expense to the customer, are entitled to their meed of credit of saving life. It gives us pleasure to state that the Ready Made Clothing manufactured and sold by Kent & Miller, 18 and 20 South Salina street, commands the entire confidence of the public. Their Fall Overcoats are just what are now most needed and will be found to be perfectly adapted to the present season. We commend to the notice and critical examination of the readers of the TIMES their fine fall stock of Men's and Boys' suits. It cannot be surpassed and the Prices are on Rock Bottom.

A DAY OF THANKSGIVING APPOINTED BY GOVERNOR CORNELL.

Proclamation.

BY ALONZO B. CORNELL, GOVERNOR.

With gratitude to our Heavenly Father for His continued protection and the many manifestations of Divine favor bestowed upon the people of this State, THURSDAY, THE TWENTY-FOURTH DAY OF NOVEMBER, instant, is hereby designated and set apart as a day of Thanksgiving to Him for the measure of prosperity which has attended us during the year now rapidly drawing to a close.

Although the parched earth has withheld a portion of its usually generous production, yet careful cultivation has been seasonably remunerated, and the garnered harvest will amply supply the necessities of those dependent upon them. Commercial and industrial pursuits have continued to enjoy exceptional prosperity; labor has been well employed and fairly compensated; a good condition of public health has prevailed; while illness and want have never, perhaps, been less observed or known in our midst. Despite a great national calamity, by which the chosen ruler of the country has been removed through assassination, the public peace has been undisturbed, and the laws have been generally respected.

Gratefully appreciating all the mercies vouchsafed unto us, and realizing our entire dependence upon Almighty God for the continuance of life and happiness, it is recommended that on the day hereby designated the people of this State suspend all secular pursuits, and, assembled in their usual places of worship, humbly acknowledge their indebtedness to Him for the blessings enjoyed during the past year. Let the day also be improved by the gathering together of families in bonds of affection. May friendships be renewed and all enemies forgotten while the poor and sick, the afflicted and unfortunate should be generously remembered.

Done at the Capitol, in the city of Albany, this fourth day of November, in the year of [L. S.] our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one.

ALONZO B. CORNELL.

Home Amusements.

We are happy to notice that the American Publishing Co. of Hartford, Conn.,—as per advertisement,—announces the publication this season of a game which cannot fail to recommend itself to anyone who will stop to examine it. Combining as it does both entertainment and instruction in a remarkable degree,—which desirable elements but very few games possess,—the time spent with it in amusement is not wasted. It is a Geographical Game entitled "Rambling Through Our Country," in which the several players who engage, take an excursion through the United States, stopping at the principal cities and points of interest, and taking a look at them and their history through the medium of an illustrated Text Book which accompanies an elegant Out Colored Map, the whole thing forming one of the most fascinating, entertaining and ably instructive games we have ever seen.

The same Company advertises also a delightful book entitled "Paquita" from the pen of the noted author and poet, Joaquin Miller.

Remember that H. & A. Rosenbloom takes the lead in hats, caps and gents' furnishing goods as well as in clothing.

ELEGANT CARDS.—John A. Haddock, 914 Arch street Philadelphia, Pa., the original wholesale card manufacturer, is sending out for the benefit of card collectors, 50 packages of 1858 elegant cards, which he will mail postpaid to any address for 25 cts additional. He will also furnish complete sets of samples of all the series which he sells, for 25 cts, comprising over 1000 sets of cards—as well as a finer box of 104 elegant cards, for FIFTY cts, postage paid. This is an excellent opportunity to increase one's stock, as Mr. Haddock's designs are many and extremely beautiful. Postage stamps may be sent. 3212

NEIGHBORING NEWS.

Book agents and diphtheria are epidemic at Adams.

Coal is worth, delivered in a Pulaski collar, just $7 per ton; with a prospect of being still higher.

The Baldwinsville Gazette says the boom in potatoes is subsiding, as there is a better crop in the country than was supposed.

John Kehoe, the pump tender at Seneca river bridge on the Oswego and Syracuse division of the D. L. & W. R.R., was severely injured Tuesday by jumping from a train at that point which he had boarded at Baldwinsville, and died Friday.

Many people will feel a sympathetic throb in reading the wall of the New York Commercial man: "The melancholy days have come, the saddest of the year, when living is a tough old job, and everything is dear."

Wednesday forenoon the sum of $300 in bills was stolen from the ticket office of the D. L. & W. railroad in Syracuse. The bills were in a book kept in the ticket office, and while the attention of Mr. Schwartz, the ticket agent was engaged at one of the windows of the office, the bold thief reached through the other window, seized the money and escaped before the robbery was discovered.

The Pulaski Democrat says the newly elected district attorney of Oswego county, Hon. N. B. Smith will make a very competent officer. Besides having years of experience as a lawyer practicing in our courts, he has the benefit of a thorough collegiate education; he has been principal of Pulaski academy, and a member of our state legislature, all of which experience is by no means any disadvantage to one in his position. He will make his headquarters at Pulaski.

The right to lay the tracks of the Ontario and Western railroad through the grounds of Fort Ontario, in Oswego, has been granted by the Secretary of War. The company is making large terminal improvements in the city, and this permission enables it to build tracks to docks which have been leased, and to new coal packets, which are building to receive the Delaware and Hudson Canal company's coal. The plans in Oswego are said to involve the construction of a large grain elevator, and a line of steam barges and transports for carriage of coal and grain, between Oswego and Canadian and upper lake ports.

The Syracuse Herald says the light fingered gentry are working Central trains. On Tuesday afternoon a woman had her pocket picked in Syracuse on a train just arrived from the east. A gentleman named Hammond from Clayton, with his wife and three children, obtained at the Central depot at Utica, on an exchange order, four tickets and a half ticket to Kansas City, paying for them $144. This family arrived in Syracuse Tuesday evening. While the train was standing in the depot, pickpockets entered the car and yelled "change cars." At this the passengers hurriedly rose to obey, when in the excitement, Mr. Hammond was relieved of all his tickets.

Secure your tickets for the popular lecture course.

It is needless to call the attention to H. & A. Rosenbloom's advertisement. Their immense trade is a sufficient guarantee that customers will find it to their interest to call on them.

An Old Lady writes us: "I am 65 years old and was feeble and nervous all the time when a bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonic. I have used little more than one bottle and feel as well as at 30." See other column.

Remember that H. & A. Rosenbloom takes the lead in hats, caps and gents furnishing goods as well as in clothing.

From A Temperance Man.

To the Editor of THE PULASKI TIMES:

Some temperately inclined individual I suppose inserted a card in the Patriot of last week warning Fulton liquor dealers to be more careful in the handling of liquor or they would be prosecuted. It says sufficient proof exists that liquor was sold election day contrary to law by the most of them. Now, this is very good as a warning, but let's it be telling a murderer: "We saw you take that man's life and if you attempt to take another body about it or someone will get wind of it and write an anonymous communication to a paper about you."

If the temperate people possess the information they claim, are they not making a farce of the cause they are advocating in giving such an unsatisfactory and ambiguous warning?

At the temperance meeting Sunday afternoon Mr. E. McCall called attention to the warning and asked if any one present knew anything about it. As the zealous temperance workers of the village were mostly present and all emphatically denied the authorship, or even endorsement of it, it is safe to surmise that it was written by some one who is undertaking to do good deeds in the dark.

The next session of the Oswego county teachers' institute will be held in the village of Parish, commencing Monday, Nov. 21st, and continuing one week. The commissioners are confident that the teachers will receive with satisfaction the announcement that Prof. Johnson and Kennedy have been appointed instructors. Ample accommodations will be made for teachers. The village of Parish is convenient of access, central and hospitable. We expect and earnestly desire a large attendance. If the school be in session, do not hesitate to close it for the purpose of attending the institute. The spirit of the age is onward. We must not stand still.

When you are continually coughing night and day, annoying everybody around you, and hoping it will go away of its own accord, you are running a dangerous risk—better use Dr. Thomas' Eucalytic Oil, an unfailing remedy in all such cases.

The only business in Fulton that is capable of advertising itself with greater emphasis than a newspaper can give it, is the one and Office trade recently established by J. Cooley Tucker in connection with his grocery and house furnishing business. The excellence of his goods and great reduction in price, makes every pound he sells profitable from house to house, and from neighborhood to neighborhood the glad tidings that all the poor as well as the rich, can afford the luxury of "the cup that cheers but does not madden," three times a day if they desire. His extensive variety enables him to please the most fastidious, but the force of habit and difference in taste make it impossible for one person to know what will please another, therefore, if by any chance any one should select a brand that does not suit, they are earnestly requested to return the same, and either try again or take their money. Mr. Tucker has a very choice brand of English and Scotch tobacco, and a fine selection of cigars, and he is giving them to his customers. He has just received a new stock of goods, and he is giving them to his customers. He has just received a new stock of goods, and he is giving them to his customers.

Song of the "Royal St John."

A saint I come to every home And with my presence cheer. I banish care and burden bear, Of women, worn and weary. I run so light, and look so bright, The ladies date upon me. No policy I make, no threads I break, Though back and forth you run me. Through every kind of goods I go, Silk, muslin, cloth and leather; Though all machines refuse to sew Yet I sew on forever. No hands I pain, no eyes I strain, To find the way to thread me. No holes have I, save needle eyes To make a case to thread me. I'm cheap and good and if you should But for a moment doubt me, Be sure and try, and then you'll buy And never be without me. I mean, I mean, I fall I blind, I ruffle, tuck and gather; And all machines I leave behind, While I sew on forever. D. A. Waterman, agent, Model shop, No 34 First street, Fulton, N. Y.

CRAIG W. FIELD has purchased the New York Express and will consolidate it with the New York Mail and from the two will emerge an afternoon one cent daily, independent in politics. Jay Gould owns and controls the World and Tribune; Gould and Field control the Journal of Commerce, the New York elevated railway, and the finances of the whole country. Gould owns nearly all the stock of the Western Union Telegraph Company and a majority of the telephone lines now in use, besides being absolute master of six hundred and fifty millions of railroad property. Gould is said to be negotiating for the principal coal and oil fields in Pennsylvania. His next move will be to pay the National debt and take a mortgage on the country and monopolize the affairs of the rock and gravel business. It will be necessary, Gould and Field evidently believe, to have the control of the main lines of the country and to control the main lines of the country.

FULTON BUS

At a meeting of the directors of the First National Bank held Tuesday evening Nov. 22, 1931, the president, Mr. D. W. Gardner said:

It is my duty to announce to this Board the death of our late friend and associate, Judge Tyler, which occurred yesterday, the 21st inst. His long and uninterrupted career with this bank renders his decease an event to be marked by those of us who remain. He was one of the original 48 incorporators of the Oswego River bank—virtually the same institution we represent to-day—of whom only four are now living and connected with it. At the time of the change from a state to a national bank, Mr. Tyler was elected a director, to which position he was re-elected every successive year since. At the annual meeting in 1915 he was chosen vice-president and two years later after the decease of our president, Hon. M. L. Lee, was made president, which position he occupied until 1920, when at his own suggestion and request he retired from the place. He was appointed attorney for the bank at its first organization and has been retained as such from that time to the present, except when absent from the country. These several trusts extending over a period of time almost equal to a generation, attest the esteem in which he has been held by the stockholders and directors of the bank, with whose interests he has been so long and honorably identified. It now remains for the members of the board to take such action as seems to them appropriate, in view of the Providence which has removed from their circle one with whom they have been so long and pleasantly associated.

Whereupon the following action was taken: Called together as a board of directors by the recent death of one of our number, we do hereby order the following minutes to be placed upon the records of this bank:

In the Providence which has again broken the circle of our associates and to the interest of this institution, we recognize the hand of Him who ordains the wisdom and infinite knowledge, therefore we now reverently and submissively to His will and sovereignty.

Now, therefore, as we cannot express to him our sense of loss, we will as the last act of respect and esteem, attend his funeral in a holy and becoming manner, at his last resting place.

Resolved, that the following be read: D. W. GARDNER, Pres. AMOS YOUNG, Secy. and Cash.

A meeting of the Oswego city bar was held at the mayor's room last Wednesday morning to take action on the death of the late Hon. Ransom H. Tyler of Fulton. The meeting was called to order by Hon. W. A. Poucher, Mr. B. D. Burt was made chairman and Hon. P. W. Callahan secretary.

MR. BURT'S REMARKS. Mr. Burt then addressed the meeting. He said he had known Judge Tyler ever since he commenced the practice of law. He was a man of spotless integrity, studious in his profession and a very successful jury lawyer. Very few lawyers prepared their cases for trial better than he. In the latter part of his career he devoted some time to the making of books. In view of these facts he thought it proper to pay a fitting tribute to his memory.

MR. TYLER'S RESOLUTIONS. Mr. W. H. Kenyon then offered the following preamble and resolutions:

The death of Hon. Ransom H. Tyler, by the manner and means of his death, and the address it imposes upon us, all give special emphasis to the life of this great man. The success he achieved in the career of his profession, but while industry and abilities like his would inevitably be successful, they alone could not secure the choice character he bore. He recognized the principle that a man has no right to succeed except by the sacrifice of his soul. His whole life was a struggle to attain to the highest of which he was capable. He was a man of no less a knowledge than of the heart of God, but he was a man of the heart of man.

"Skilled in the subtlest ways, he knew And owned the higher ends of law; Still more majestic on his view The awful face, the scholar's law; His home the heart of his heroic The choral harmonies, whereby The stars, through all their spheres rejoice, The rhythmic rule of earth and sky.

With his clear and vigorous intellect, his thorough culture, his tireless industry, all concentrated to the cause of his country, he not only achieved high success as an advocate, author, judge and citizen, but he prepared himself for the future, giving to his people a character, his personal moral powers in harmony with the mind of the great Law-Giver. Recognizing these facts, we are gathered here to respect and affection to his great services to his country and to his people, and to his family, and to his country.

That the death of Hon. Ransom H. Tyler is a great loss to the community. That his career, though closed, should be an inspiration to us to emulate his example and to strive to raise our profession to the high plane in which he moved.

That we attend his funeral in a body. That we tender to the family of Judge Tyler our sincere sympathy in their irreparable loss. That the following resolutions be forwarded to the family.

Appropriate tributes to the memory of the deceased were paid in short addresses by Hon. A. B. Getty and Hon. Edwin Allen.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted and the meeting adjourned.

The following members of the Oswego city bar attended the funeral of Judge Tyler: A. B. Getty, Chas. Rhodes, Edwin Allen, W. A. Poucher and W. N. Kenyon.

Broke Out of Jail.

Last Thursday evening Peter Brennan, formerly of Hannibal, who was an inmate of the county jail in Oswego awaiting indictment for stealing a horse and buggy from Orville Dean of Phoenix broke jail. The Oswego Times says by some means he obtained a saw and cut the door of his ward in two. The door was made of heavy oak planks crossed to make it stronger, but Brennan sawed between the cross pieces. After opening the door below the lock, he hid himself in a dark corner of the room with a heavy iron bar in his hand ready for the turnkey. About 6:15 turnkey Meyers, followed by a man with the supper, entered the jail. Meyers, noticing the unusual light from Brennan's ward went to the door when Brennan slipped from his hiding place, threw the man carrying the supper into a corner, snatched the key from another man at the outer door and knuckled him down, and rushing into a back yard, scaled the fence and escaped. Brennan is about 40 years of age, 5 feet 7 inches in height, weighs 160 pounds; he has a broad face; dark hair, slightly gray; dark moustache, slightly sandy; and when he escaped, wore a black slouch hat, faded brown coat and dark pants. He is still at large.

A Good Selection.

The young doctor is already going up in his profession and the University fortunate in securing a thorough and competent instructor. He will keep his appointment in Fulton every Saturday.

Patrons of Husbandry.

The next regular quarterly meeting of the Oswego county council P. of H. will be held at the court house in Oswego, Tuesday, Dec 13, when delegates to the State grange will be elected. L. LADUE, Sec'y.

Articles were filed at Albany Monday incorporating the Syracuse & Oswego railroad, with a capital of $400,000. The road proposed will extend twenty-three miles from Syracuse to a point on the Midland at or near Ingalls Crossing and thence to Oswego via the Midland. It is said to have been incorporated solely to balk the building of the Phoenix route, and will probably exist only upon paper.

Joseph Bailey, formerly of Oswego Falls died in Bennington, Vt. Nov 26 of typhoid fever, aged 29 years. His remains were brought to Oswego Falls and funeral was held yesterday afternoon from the residence of John McIntosh, Rev. L. Golden of the Baptist church officiating, and the Fulton Masonic lodge of which Mr. Bailey was a member attending. Mr. Bailey came from England to Oswego Falls in 1869 and lived there until 1877 when he went to Bennington with Nathan Hodgson. He leaves a wife and two children.

The Carreno-Donaghi Concert company gave the initial entertainment to the Popular Lecture Course for this season as an appreciative and cultured audience in Nichols hall last Wednesday evening. The company was well received and their concert was well received and of an excellent character. Carreno's playing was remarkable for finish, expression and melody, and the remainder of the company are artists in their line. The concert may have appeared and sounded high toned to people of low sized intellect who are prone to ridicule genuine talent, but happily, they number not few.

Manager Mead deserves credit for placing before Fulton audiences entertainments of so high an order and we are glad to note that his work is being appreciated by good sized audiences. Next Tuesday evening, Dec. 6, Stuart Rogers the famous elocutionist and impersonator will appear in his wonderful character creations.

The naughty Oswego Times says: The Fulton Patriot in its criticism on the Carreno-Donaghi concert, says that the music was fine but too high toned. A hand organ or a saw harp would fill the bill for the Patriot.

Folley Seminary.

A rehearsal was held by the pupils of Miss Ella Gilmore, on Monday evening at Folley Seminary, and many fine selections were rendered in a most satisfactory manner. A goodly number were in attendance, and were highly delighted at the progress evidenced by the pupils. Miss Ella Gilmore deserves credit for the rapid progress of her pupils. The entertainment opened by a duet by Miss Carrie Jennings and her instructor in which they did themselves great credit, and were highly applauded. The graceful and artistic manner in which Miss Jennings rendered her part was especially pleasing. Among the most notable features of the event was the rendition of a song, entitled "King David" by Miss Hubbard, which was well executed, and although her voice was not very strong, it was soft and sweet, and her words were spoken plainly, for which she was highly complimented.

THE FORTUNE TELLER

Wednesday, Nov. 20, 1881.

That Boy of Gallagher's

The circumstances were as follows: Mr

Gallagher had to take a train that left at six o'clock, so he arose about daylight to breakfast, and thought he had better put on some clean boots instead of the light shoes he wore in the evening. Now, it seems that Gallagher's son had worn the old man's boots while roller skating, and had left skates on the boots, and in the darkness Gallagher did not notice this fact as he pulled the boots on, though he thought they felt heavy. He then groped his way to the head of the stairs, the skates making no trouble on the carpet. Then he started down stairs. He got there dreadfully sudden. He was terribly annoyed as he picked himself up, and very wicked things as he started for the dining-room. Breakfast was laid, but only a dim light was burning. Immediately he set foot on the polished floor his feet flew into the air and his head came down with terrible force. The wild yell that he gave brought his wife and mother-in-law from the kitchen. He rose to his feet, but they immediately started off in different directions, and after wrenching his spine and knee joints terribly in trying to control them, they got away, and he jared the spinal column as he went down. "Land of gosh!"

this floor is solid," he roared, as he began to make efforts to rise. "Have you appropriety or have you been drinking?" asked his wife, as she strove to assist him to get up. "You hold your jaw, you idiot!" he replied, and then she let go of him sort of sudden, and down he went, landing himself in six places.

"Gosh," "unkel," "drat," and "durn," were words called into requisition to relieve his mind that time, and he told his mother-in-law, who had fallen laughing into a chair, that he hoped she would meet crows every time she went out. Then he essayed to rise once more, and got upon his feet. The skat began to slip, but he struggled like a hero, and clutched the air wildly to keep his balance. No use. As he fell forward he wildly grabbed the tablecloth, and as a result yanked the entire breakfast down upon him. The hot tea scalded him, the pepper got into his eyes, the mustard into his mouth and the eggs all over him. His cries were loud. They halted him from the debris and started to put him to bed when they discovered the rollers. Mr Gallagher was terribly used up, but he started at once to find his son, and the lad's sighing over his great grief was heard blocks away.

Incredible.

F. A. Scratch druggist, Ruthean, Out-writer: "I have the greatest confidence in your Burdock Blood Bitters. In one case with which I am personally acquainted the success was almost incredible. One lady told me that half a bottle did her more good than hundreds of dollars worth of medicines she had previously taken." Price $1.00, trial size ten cents.

Fashion Notes.

Colored flannel skirts are in favor.

The large bow drapery is a feature of both simple and elaborate dresses.

Gathered flounces are fashionable for rich stuffs, such as satin and velvet.

The new short basques are likely to become very popular with young ladies.

Quilted satin basqued skirts are favorable among the gowns of the season.

Among the latest costumes of the season are those of black trimmed with peony-rod.

In all the styles of costume shown the drapery is much higher than in early wear.

The newest basques have a Watteau pleat in the back instead of two double box pleats.

Wappers in Mother Hubbard shape are very comfortable garments for ladies when made of soft sleazy flannels.

The latest dresses from Worth's, Pa. s show pauper drapery effects far more beautiful than those brought out in early autumn.

Embossed costumes are shown among the latest importations. The figures in relief are sewed on instead of being woven in the fabric.

Very distinguished looking costumes are made of dark India cashmires, on which are wrought spots of contrasting color as large as a silver dollar.

Very full frills of white lace are gathered down each side of the front of vests, and allowed to fall crosswise forward upon the vest in Louis Quatorze fashion.

The fashion of covering the back with of dresses from top to bottom is seen in the richest fabrics. These flounces are gathered instead of being pleated, and are cut bliss.

Some of the new costumes exhibit contrasts of color which are very attractive.

For instance, dark blue satin is trimmed with brown plush and green velvet with brown fur beaver.

A pretty finish for the front of the neck of black dresses is to have black satin ribbon two inches wide laid in three loops turned backward on each side of a standing collar, with ends hanging below, and above this a pleating of black Spanish lace.

The Bazar says: "A new arrange-ment for back breadths, differing entirely from these, is shown effectively when two rich materials are combined in one dress—for instance, black satin with gay peony-rod broadcloth; the back breadths of black satin are lined with red broadcloth, folded into a single great Watteau pleat, and are cut shorter in the middle in a point toward the top, so that the red lining shows in each fold of the pleat."

The Young Men's Catholic Association, composed of young gentlemen belonging to the senior department of Fulton graded school, will be held in the chapel of the school building this evening at 7:30. The question for debate will be: "Resolved, That the pulpit has more influence than the press." Frank Waterman is the leader of the affirmative, and Edward Hill of the negative. This society was gotten up by the young men of the school for self culture and practice in oratory. The subjects given for discussion provoke thought; train the mind to thinking and the tongue for ready and correct speech. As soon as the organization is more thoroughly perfected a regular announcement of meetings will be given.

Young Men's Catholic Association.
A Young Men's Catholic Association has recently been formed in Fulton and is now in a flourishing condition having at present about fifty members. The object of the society is to promote the social and moral condition of young men; to provide elevating and instructive reading matter and literary entertainments and promote the general prosperity of one another by brotherly and companionable intercourse. Fulton has plenty of young Catholic men of ability and the society promises to be productive of great good. Board of Supervisors.

Superior Vedder presented a petition from the assessors of the town of Granby asking correction of roll as to assessment of Henry Lake for $5,000 personal, and that it be stricken from the roll. Mr. Judson asked if the supervisor requests that it be granted, and Mr. Vedder said he did. They could not hold him for the tax. The petition was denied by vote of the board, and Mr. Judson moved to reconsider.

Mr. Vedder said it was found that Lake was not a resident when put on the roll, and the result would be a litigation. In reply to Mr. Judson, Mr. Vedder said that Lake had the same amount loaned in the town as he had last year. The motion to reconsider was carried, and the petition, on motion of Mr. Judson was granted—yeas 23, nays 3.

Mr. Rice, chairman of the special committee appointed by the board of supervisors of 1880 to appear before the board of equalization to bring about a reduction of the valuation of Oswego county, reported that the committee appeared before the State board on Sept. 6th, and that the board had reduced the valuation $715,573, which makes a reduction of about $1,600 in the State tax paid by the county.

Mr. Rice offered a resolution requesting that the board levy upon the taxable property of the town of Volney $250 for roads and bridges $500 for poor fund and $900 for repair of roads and bridges.

Benjamin Franklin Caywood, of Mariaville, N. Y., formerly of Fulton, is the subject of considerable talk. He has of late years been a tin pedlar for a Mariaville firm. It is asserted that Benjamin has left a wife and four children and deposed with a neighbor's wife to parts unknown. He wrote his wife from the Hotel Burns, in Syracuse, the consoling news that he would inform her some time why he was erratic. His mother, Mrs. Rodney Seymour, resides in the Patterson block, in this village.

The funeral of Mrs. Woodworth, of Sterling, whose death by suicide last Sunday evening has been detailed in the Express, took place yesterday, the remains being taken to Fulton for interment. On the inquest, Monday, the jury returned a verdict of "death by drowning while temporarily insane." The family physician, it seems, says that death was caused by congestion of the brain, and her decease took place before she reached the water. If such was the case, how did the body get into the lake? This is quite an important question.

Deaths.
Miss Annie Whiteley died at the residence of her aunt, Mrs. John Smith in Oswego Falls, last Thursday evening, aged 28, of congestion of the brain. Since the death of Mr. Edward Ellis a few weeks ago Miss Whiteley has suffered from the apprehension that she would be a victim of fever, and the thought preyed upon her mind to such an extent that it is thought to have caused her death. She was employed in the barling room of the Oswego Falls factory and her companions adorned her casket with two lovely wreaths of flowers. Her parents are in England. She died among strangers, and far from home, but kind hands made smooth her last hours. Funeral services were held at Zion church Sunday at 3 p. m., Rev. E. Throwing Kerosene Lamps.
Throwing kerosene lamps appears to be a popular pastime with maddened husbands just at present in neighboring towns:

Horace McGee, a farmer living near Weedsport, threw a burning lamp at his wife because she called him a blockhead. She dodged the lamp and it struck a cradle containing a four months old baby and exploded. The mother extinguished the flames, and grabbed the baby who escaped unharmed.

Charles B. Mahon was arrested in Oswego Monday night, on complaint of his wife, for being drunk, creating a disturbance, and threatening to beat her. It is said that he threw a lighted lamp at his wife, but missed her and smashed out a window.

David Kimball, of Victory, Cayuga county, is striking her with a kerosene lamp and burning her to death. Kimball claims the affair was an accident and the dead woman's sister says it was the result of a scuffle. The dead woman however, made an ante-mortem statement accusing her husband of causing her death. The affair happened on Tuesday, last, and the woman died Friday. It is alleged that Kimball was drunk at the time and threw the lamp at his wife because she would not go out and put the team in the barn that he had returned drunk with.

Mrs. Partington will be "at home" to all callers Thursday and Friday night in Nichols Hall.

The second rendering of Mrs. Partington drew good audiences at both performances yesterday. This pleasing merry play both in its character and plot has every right to be styled a true comedy. The first act opens in Mrs. Partington's kitchen on washing day. In it are depicted the bustling tricks of the Mrs. Partingtons of the town. Mrs. Partington's son, the foppishness of Frederick Holding Sarotis, an admirer of the sublime, and above all the prefix and affix butchering of Chas. Postelle in his role of Mrs. Partington. The middle act opens in Mrs. Partington's room. Mrs. Partington is in her castle of like and Sarah was finally encircled. During the third act Chas. Postelle produced some of his specialties, one of these being a stump speech on women's rights, in which he dealt some cutting remarks on some of our business men, much to the amusement of the ladies. But the old fashioned dance finally brought down the house. The story on the whole is very ingeniously conceived and hoots on to the stair calamity in a lively and bustling manner. A pair of stairs, plain enough to the eye, were erected, but in such a manner that the ascent could easily be made, but on endeavoring to descend they are closed like a pair of shutters, forcing the unfortunate descend to the ground with great vim. Mrs. Partington will be repeated the remainder of the week.

WISDOM OF EXPERIENCE
"Thou should'st not have been old before thou had'st been wise." [King Lear.]

This admonition comes to many with a force that leads them to exclaim: "Oh, that I could live my life again, knowing what I know now." "Vain wish—Thou should'st not have been old before thou had'st been wise." But youth is heedless. The experience of the elders are unheeded warnings. In some way the young are sure that their own experiences will prove exceptional and so the precious time of youth is frittered away in folly, and wisdom comes too late. Nevertheless, it is the duty of public teachers to warn, to admonish to advance, even though their counsels fall upon unheeding ears. But not all young men are unwise. Like their elders, they have already learned that the place to procure the best clothing, at most reasonable prices, is at Kent & Miller's, 18 & 20 South Salina street. They have been wise before they have become old, and when a new Overcoat is needed, or a dress suit, or a business suit, or any article of outer wearing apparel whatever, they know excellence of material, of making, of finish, of wear of style, combined with low prices, which challenge comparison, are always to be found at Kent & Miller's. Their present stock surpasses anything heretofore made and exhibited by them. If you want a fine overcoat at any price, or a suit of ready made clothing, don't wait for wisdom until you get old, but take our advice and go at once to KENT & MILLER'S, 18 and 20 South Salina St.

THE ANNUAL MESSAGE

President Arthur's Presentation of National Affairs

Home and Foreign Matters Fully Discussed—Financial Exhibit—Important Recommendations—Civil Service Principles Advocated—A Highly Satisfactory Document.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

An appalling calamity has befallen the American people since their chosen representatives met in the halls where you are now assembled. We might also recall with unalloyed content the rare prosperity with which, throughout the year, the nation has been blessed. Its harvests have been plentiful; its varied industries have thriven; the health of its people has been preserved; it has maintained with foreign governments undisturbed relations of amity and peace. For these manifestations of His favor we owe to Him who holds our destiny in His hands the tribute of our grateful devotion. To that mysterious exercise of His will which has taken from us a loved and illustrious citizen, who was but lately the head of the nation, we bow in sorrow and submission. The memory of his exalted character, of his noble achievements and of his political life will be treasured forever as a sacred possession of the whole people. The announcement of his death from us a loved and illustrious citizen, who was but lately the head of the nation, we bow in sorrow and submission. The memory of his exalted character, of his noble achievements and of his political life will be treasured forever as a sacred possession of the whole people. The announcement of his death from us a loved and illustrious citizen, who was but lately the head of the nation, we bow in sorrow and submission. The memory of his exalted character, of his noble achievements and of his political life will be treasured forever as a sacred possession of the whole people.

OUR FOREIGN RELATIONS.

The feeling of good-will between our own government and that of Great Britain was never more marked than at present. In recognition of this pleasing fact I directed, on the occasion of the centennial celebration at Yorktown, that a salute be given to the British flag. Save for the correspondence to which I shall refer hereafter, in relation to the proposed canal across the Isthmus of Panama, little has occurred worthy of mention in the diplomatic relation of the two countries.

Early in the year the Fortune Bay claims were satisfactorily settled by the British government paying in full the sum of $15,000, most of which has been already distributed. As the terms of settlement directed compensation for the injuries suffered by our fishermen at Ampe Bay, there has been retained from the gross award a sum which is deemed adequate for those claims.

Participation of Americans in the exhibitions at Melbourne and Sydney will be approvingly noted in the reports of the exhibitions, soon to be presented to congress. They will disclose the readiness of our own countrymen to make successful competition in distant fields of enterprise. The negotiations for an international copyright convention are in hopeful progress.

The surrender of Sitting Bull and his forces upon the Canadian frontier has allayed apprehension, although bodies of British Indians still create the high level of suspense. Upon this subject a correspondence has been opened which promises an adequate understanding. Our troops have orders to avoid, meanwhile, all collision with alien Indians.

The presence at the Yorktown celebration of representatives of the republican descendants of Lafayette and of his gallant compatriots, who were our allies in the revolution, has served to strengthen the spirit of good will which has always existed between the two nations.

You will be furnished with the proceedings of the bi-metallic conference, held during the summer at the city of Paris. No accord was reached, but a valuable interchange of views was had and the conference next year will be renewed.

At the electrical exhibition and congress, also held at Paris, this country was creditably represented by eminent specialists who, in the absence of an appropriation, were lent their facilities at the instance of the State department. While our exhibitors in this almost exclusively American field of achievement have won several valuable awards, I recommend congress to provide for the repayment of personal expenses incurred in the exhibition, by the honorary commissioners and delegates.

No new questions respecting the state of our naturalized citizens in Germany have arisen during the year and causes for complaint, especially in Alsace and Lorraine, have practically ceased through the liberal action of the imperial government in accepting our often expressed views on the subject.

The application of the treaty of 1868 to the lately acquired Rhinist provinces has received very earnest attention, and a definite, lasting agreement on this point is confidently expected.

The participation of the descendants of Baron Von Steuben in the Yorktown festivities, and their subsequent reception by their American kinsmen, strikingly show the ties of good will which unite the German people and our own.

Our intercourse with Spain has been friendly. An agreement, concluded in February last, fixes the term for the labor of the Spanish and American claims commission. The Spanish government has been requested to pay the late awards of that commission and will, it is believed, accede to the request promptly and courteously, as on former occasions.

By recent legislation serious fines have been imposed on American shipping in Spanish and colonial ports for slight irregularities in manifests. One case of hardship is especially worthy of attention. The bark Masale, bound for Japan, entered Manila in distress, and was there sought to be confiscated under the Spanish revenue laws, for alleged shortage in her transhipped cargo. Though efforts for her relief have thus far proved unavailing, it is expected the whole difficulty will be adjusted in a friendly spirit.

The senate's resolutions of condolence at the death of the Don Alvaro are warmly appreciated in the Spanish government, which, in turn, has expressed its sympathy in our late national bereavement. It is desirable that our cordial relation with Russia be maintained.

Several important international conferences have been held in Italy during the year. At the geographical congress of Venice, at the beneficent congress of Milan and at the hygienic congress of Turin this country was represented by delegates from different branches of the public service, or by private citizens, duly accredited by honorary capacities. It is hoped congress will give such prominence to the results of their participation as they may seem to deserve.

The abolition of all discriminating duties against such colonial productions of the Dutch East Indies, as are imported either from Holland or have been already considered by congress. I trust at the present session the matter may be favorably concluded.

The insecurity of life and property in many parts of Turkey has given rise to correspondence with the porte, touching particularly our better protection of American missionaries in the empire. The condemned murderer of the eminent missionary, Dr. Justin W. Parsons, has not yet been executed, although this government has repeatedly demanded that exemplary justice be done.

The Swiss government has solicited the good offices of our diplomatic and consular agents for the protection of its citizens in countries where it is not itself represented. This request has, within proper limits, been granted. Our agents in Switzerland have been instructed to protect against the conduct of the authorities any persons who are in pending migration to this country of criminals and other objectionable persons. Several such persons, through the co-operation of the commissioners of emigration at New York, have been sent back by the steamers which brought them. A continuance of this course may prove a more effective remedy than diplomatic remonstrance.

Treaties of commerce and navigation, and for the regulation of consular privileges have been concluded with Roumania and Serbia, since their admission into the family of European States.

As is natural with contiguous States, having like institutions and like aims of advancement, the development of the friendship of the United States and Mexico has been constantly maintained. This government has lost no occasion of encouraging the Mexican government to a beneficial realization of the mutual advantages which will result from more intimate commercial intercourse, and from the opening of the rich interior of Mexico to railway enterprises. I deem it important that means be provided to restrain the lawlessness unfortunately so common on the frontier, and to suppress forays upon the reservations of Indians on either side of the Rio Grande.

The neighboring States of Central America have presented internal peace and their outward relations toward us are friendly. The friendly relations of these countries, and those which are common to them by reason of their geographical relations. The boundary dispute between Guatemala and Mexico has afforded this government an opportunity to present good offices for preventing rupture between those States, and for procuring a peaceful solution of the question. I cherish a strong hope that, in view of our relation of amity with both countries, our friendly counsels may prevail.

A special envoy of Guatemala has brought to our notice the death of his government and people on the death of President Garfield.

The Costa Rican government lately framed an engagement with Colombia, settling by arbitration the boundary question between those countries, providing that the post of arbitrator should be offered successively to the king of Belgium, king of Spain and the president of the Argentine confederation. The king of the Belgians has declined to act, but I am not as yet advised of the action of the king of Spain. As we have certain interests in the disputed territory, which are protected by our treaty engagement with one of the parties, it is important that the arbitration should not, without our consent, affect our rights, and the government has accordingly thought proper to make its views known to the parties to the agreement, as well as to intimate them to the Belgian and Spanish governments.

The questions growing out of the proposed inter-oceanic waterway across the Isthmus of Panama are of grave national importance. The government has not been unmindful of the solemn obligations imposed upon it by the compact of 1846, with Colombia as independent and sovereign mistress of the territory crossed by the canal, and has sought to render them effective by fresh engagements with the Colombian Republic, looking to their practical execution. Negotiations to this end, after they had reached what appeared to be a mutually satisfactory solution here, were met in Colombia by a disavowal of the powers which its envoy had proposed to the European powers to join in a guarantee of the neutrality of the proposed Panama canal. Guarantees, which would be in direct contravention of our obligation as sole guarantors of the integrity of the Colombian territory above of the neutrality of the canal itself.

My lamented predecessor felt it his duty to place before the European powers reasons which make the prior guarantee of the United States indispensable, and for which the intervention of any foreign guarantee might be regarded as a superfluous and unnecessary act. Recognizing the probable reliance of British government on the provisions of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty of 1850, as affording room for a share in the guarantee which the United States covenanted with Colombia four years before, I have not hesitated to supplement the action of my predecessor by proposing to the European powers a modification of that instrument, and the abrogation of such clauses thereof as do not comport with the obligations of the United States to Colombia, or with the vital needs of the two friendly parties to the compact.

This government sees with great concern the continuance of hostile relations between Chile, Bolivia and Peru. An early peace between these republics is essential to the peace of the continent. It is especially needful with respect to American interests, whose classification with active hostilities has evoked energetic remonstrances from this government. As in the case of the Chilean consul, agreement with Italy, has been sanctioned and proclaimed, which puts at rest the conflict of jurisdiction in case of crimes on ship-board.

THE REPORT OF THE POSTMASTER GENERAL. The report of the postmaster general is a gratifying exhibit of the growth and efficiency of the postal service. The receipts from postage and other ordinary sources during the past fiscal year were $36,430,816.38; the receipts from money order business were $295,581.39, making a total of $36,726,397.77 dollars. The expenditures for the fiscal year were $3,521,738.46 dollars, or 9.6 per cent. of the amount expended. The receipts were 3,439,018.63 dollars in excess of those of the previous year, and 4,575,997.97 in excess of the estimate made two years ago, before the present period of business prosperity had fairly begun.

The whole number of letters mailed in this country in the last fiscal year exceeded a thousand millions. The registry system is reported to be in an excellent condition, having been remodelled during the past year. The number of good letters mailed during the last fiscal year was 3,718,822,20, an increase over the fiscal year ending June 30, 1877, of $245,443.40. The entire number of letters and packages registered during the year was 3,338,910, of which 3,051 were lost or destroyed in transit.

The operations of the money order system are multiplying yearly under the impulse of immigration, of the rapid development of the newer States and Territories, and a consequent demand for additional means of intercommunications and exchanges. During the past year 338 additional post office orders have been established, making a total of 5,490 in operation at the date of this report. During the year the domestic money orders aggregated $105,075,769.35.

A modification of the system is suggested, reducing the fees for money orders now exacted from 5 to 3 cents to five cents and making the maximum limit $100 in place of $50. Legislation for the disposition of unclaimed money orders in possession of the postoffice department is recommended. In view of the fact that their total value now exceeds a million dollars, the attention of congress is again invited to the subject of establishing a system of savings depositories in connection with the postoffice department.

The statistics of the mail transportation show that during the fiscal year the railway routes have been increased in length 8,249 miles and the steamship routes have been decreased in length 2,182 miles and in cost $134,354. The so called star routes have been decreased in length 3,940 miles and in cost $364,144. Nearly all the more expensive routes have been superseded by railway service. The cost of the star service must therefore decrease in the western States and territories. The Postmaster General, however, calls attention to the constantly increasing cost of railway mail service as a reason for the necessity of making the department a self-sustaining one.

Postal intercourse with foreign countries has kept pace with the growth of the domestic service. Within the past year several countries and colonies have declared their adhesion to the postal union. It now includes all those which have not excepted themselves, except Bolivia, Costa Rica, New Zealand and the British colonies of Australia.

MODIFYING THE COURT SYSTEM. As has been already stated, great reductions have recently been made in the expense of the Star route service. The investigations of the department of justice and the post-office department resulted in the presentation of indictments against persons formerly connected with this service, accusing them of offenses which, in the opinion of the department, joined upon the officials who are charged with the conduct of the cases on the part of the government, and upon the eminent counsel who, before my accession to the Presidency, were called to their assistance, the necessity of duly prosecuting with the utmost vigor of the law all persons who may be found chargeable with frauds upon the postal service.

The acting attorney-general calls attention to the necessity of modifying the present system of courts of the United States, a necessity due to the large increase of business; especially in the federal courts. The allegations in our federal tribunals became greatly multiplied after the close of the last war. As long as that expansion might be attributable to the abnormal condition in which the community found itself immediately after the return of peace, prudence required no change to be made in the constitution of our judicial tribunals. I have, an institution of our judicial tribunals, but it has now become apparent that the immense increase of litigation has directly resulted from the wonderful growth and development of the country. There is no ground for the belief that the business of the United States courts will ever be less in volume than at present; indeed, that it is likely to be much greater is generally recognized by the bench and bar. In view of the fact that congress has already given much consideration to this subject I make no suggestion as to detail, but express a hope that your deliberations will result in such legislation as will give early relief to our overburdened courts.

The acting attorney-general also calls attention to the disturbance of public Teaching School and Boarding Around.

HARPER'S BAZAR.
My thoughts go back to the rosy prime,
And memory peeks away the scenes Aft' the black New England clime, Through half a century's lapse of years,
On a highway corner the school-house stands, Under an old tree broad and tall,
And a child in a laughing mood Ope the master's waiting call.
They pile together their sleds and skates, Hang hats and hoods in the entryway, And gathering pencils, books, and slates, Diligent study succeeds to play.
A mountain stream turns a gray stone mill, That runs with a low and slumbering sound, And there in fancy I wander still,
Teaching school and boarding around.

With doors and windows of faded red,
A steeple that shades the summer glare,
And wood well piled in the sheltering shed, There's an ancient barn with swallow holes High in the gable, three in a line;
The little boy sits in the deep snow rolls;
From racks of hay feed the doleful birds; Close by are huddled the timorous sheep,
As the falls descend from the threshold floor,
The pattering poultry stealthily creep And silently wait at the open door For each stray kernel of brittle grain.
Full of content was the lot I found!
Among the farm folk, honest and plain,
Teaching school and boarding around.
The farmer's table has lavish supplies: Chicken, and sausage of flavor rare, Oralers and cookies, and puddings and pies, Are items rich in the bill of fare.
The teacher sleeps in a full, soft bed, Kept clean for guests in the great spare room, With gay chintz curtains over his head And blankets warm in the old handloom.
The thrifty wife on the brink of day Surveys from her room the morning le end, And breakfast ended, we haste away O'er the shining crust to the district school.
Here morals are pure and manners sincere,
And men in the church and state renowned Have made the first step in a high career,

IN AUBURN STATE PRISON.

A DAY AMONG THE STRIPES.

Convicts Making Beer—How They are Punished—Sunday in the Chapel—An Interesting Account of Prison Life.

The prevalence of drunkenness in the state prison at Auburn once puzzled the officers for a long time. It was at first supposed that the convicts were making beer in some one of the cell blocks, but it was discovered that a distillery was in full operation within the walls of the institution. An enterprising convict had rigged up a still in a secluded room in the kitchen, and with corn meal and rye was able to produce a liquid that would intoxicate whoever drank very much of it. The man and his thriving business, and when he was discovered he was making money at a rapid rate. "Beer," as it is called, is made even to this day. The beverage is a brewing of bread crusts and yeast, and is exhilarating and nothing more. The men in the kitchen make and sell it to the prisoners. At one time counterfeiting was actually carried on in the prison. Imitations were made of silver coins which would readily pass for the real thing. Molds were made of plaster of Paris, and the ten, twenty-five and fifty cent pieces were plated in the sallyard hardware shop. The convicts were well supplied with these bogus money, and a great deal of it found its way into circulation outside. The men are not allowed to carry watches, but a great many of them do, notwithstanding the rule to the contrary. Usually the watches are kept in leather bags which are suspended by a string about the neck underneath the clothing. A good many of the prisoners read the newspapers regularly. How they obtain them is a mystery. The New York dailies reach Auburn at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and often they will get into the hands of the convicts the same evening. Each prisoner has a right to a paper. One paper will do for a dozen men or more. The newspapers must be brought in by officers who are a little lax in discipline. It is supposed that all letters written by convicts pass through the hands of the chaplain, whose duty it is to see that they contain no mischievous or improper language. Half of the men in the prison read and receive letters that the chaplain never sees. These "go through the under ground," as the officers say. Generally they are taken in and out by citizen foremen, whose sympathies the men enlist. Some of the convicts send out for raw steaks, which they broil at the forges and in the furnaces. Others prefer cake and pie, for which they will spend every cent they can procure. Joe Coburn used to have two large mice pie sent to him regularly twice a week from New York. Finally the agent told Joe that he would be compelled to deny him his toothsome pastry, and the semi-weekly shipment of pie was discontinued. Joe was then in the state shop, and was employed a great deal of the time at his trade—that of a shoemaker. He did not enjoy the comfort then, that he did later when he was appointed the deputy agent's waiter, and he complained because he was treated so severely. Joe was always a well-behaved prisoner, and was never guilty of any misdeeds. While he was in the state shop, the agent's waiter it was his duty to apply the paddle to refractory convicts, and that lowered him in the estimation of the men. One of Joe's last exploits at Auburn was to knock down a man who drew a knife and threatened to stab him. Joe was often visited by friends and relatives, and was never allowed to leave the prison. He was a good fellow, and was a great favorite with the men. He was a good fellow, and was a great favorite with the men. He was a good fellow, and was a great favorite with the men.

THE VALLEY OF DEATH.

The Valley of Death, a spot almost as terrible as the Prophet's valley of dry bones, lies just north of the old Mormon road to California, in Utah—a region thirty miles long by thirty broad and surrounded, except at two points, by inaccessible mountains. It is totally devoid of water and vegetation, and the shadow of a bird or wild beast never darkened its white, glaring sands. The Kansas Pacific railroad engineers discovered it, and some papers which show the route of the "lost Mormon train," which came south from Salt Lake in 1850, guided by a Mormon. When near Death's Valley some came to the conclusion that the Mormon knew nothing about the country, so they appointed one of their number a leader and broke off from their party. The leader turned due west. So with the people and wagons and the flocks he traveled three days and then descended into the broad valley whose treacherous mirage promised water. The reached the center, but only the white sands, bounded by scorching peaks met the gaze. An avowed the valley they wandered, and one by one the men died, and the panting flocks stretched themselves in death under the sun. The children, crying for water, died at their mothers' breasts, and with swollen tongues and burning vitals the mothers followed. Wagon after wagon was abandoned, and strong men tottered and raved and died. After a week's wandering a dozen survivors found some water in a hollow of a mountain. It lasted but a short time, when all perished but two, who escaped out of the valley followed the trail of their former companions. Eighty-seven perished here, and now, after thirty-one years, the wagons stand complete, the iron works and tires are bright, and the shriveled skeletons lie side by side.

Lawyer and Witness.

A young lawyer of the city of Providence tells a story about himself which is good enough to go on record. He was trying a "run case" at Bristol not long ago, when a witness was put on the stand to testify to the reputation of the place in question. The witness, a stage driver, in answer to a query as to the reputation of the place, said: "A run-shop." The lawyer inquired, "You say it has the reputation of being a run-shop?" "Yes, sir." "Alvion did you ever hear say it was a run-shop?" The witness didn't recollect of any one he had heard say so. "What," said the lawyer, "you have sworn this place has the reputation of being a run-shop, and yet you can't tell of any one you ever heard say so?" The witness was staggered for a moment—in the words of the lawyer, "I had him"—and the lawyer was feeling triumphant, when the witness gathered himself together and quietly remarked, addressing the lawyer: "Well, you have the reputation of being a very smart lawyer, but I never heard any one say so." A Ship's Log.

The speed of vessels is approximately determined by the use of the log and log-line. The log is a triangular or quadrangular piece of wood about a quarter of an inch thick, so balanced by means of a plate of lead as to swim perpendicularly in the water, with about two-thirds of it under the water. The log-line is a small cord, one end of which, divided into knots, is attached to the log. The log is fastened to the log, while the other is wound round a reel in the ship. The log thus poised, keeps its place in the water, while the line is unwound from the reel as the ship moves through the water, and the length of line unwound in a given time gives the rate of the ship's sailing. This is calculated by knots made on the line by certain distances, while the time is measured by a sand glass of a certain number of seconds. The length between the knots is so proportioned to the time of the glass that the knots unwound while the glass runs down show the number of miles the ship is sailing per hour. The first knot is placed about five fathoms from the log, to allow the latter to get clear of the ship before the reckoning commences. This is called the stray line.

BY JAMES FAYNE.

I am one of those persons, envied for three months in the year and pitied for three months, who "live a little way" out of London. In the summer our residence is a charming one; the garden especially is delightful and attracts troops of London friends. They are not only always willing to dine with us, but drop in of their own notion and stay for the last train to town. The vague observation "any fine day," or the more evasive phrase, "some fine day," used in complimentary invitations, are then very dangerous for us to employ, for we are taken ad hoc, just as though we meant it. This would be very gratifying, however expensive, if it only happened all the year round. But from October to June nobody "comes near" us.

In reply to our modest invitations we then receive such expressions of tender regret as would convince the most sceptical: "A previous engagement!" "Indisposition of our youngest born," "the horses ill," some catastrophe or other always prevents them from enjoying another evening with us "like that charming one they spent last July." They hope, however, to be given the same happy chance again, "when the weather is a little less inclement," by which they mean next summer. As for coming to dine with us in winter, they will see us further first—by which they mean next first. Sometimes at their own boards we hear this stated, though of course without any intentional application. Some guests will observe to us, upros of dinners, "it is most extraordinary how people who live half a dozen miles out of town will attempt to ignore the seasons and expect you to go and dine with them just as if it was August, though!" "You see," says one of the ladies, "my room—so comfortable, so excellent now, was saying the other day—the very height of personal comfort."

As we have occupied our present residence, for some years, we have long had the concert taken out of us; but we have still our feelings. Our social toes are not probably frosted, and when thus skidded upon us are aware of the circumstances. It gives us to know what times has thought (and said) of us, and my wife drops a quiet tear or two during our drive home in the brougham. I am bound to confess it is rather a long ride. I feel myself dropping asleep before we have got to the great common near our house, and the great common near our house. It is a beautiful, breezy place, a lovely view thence; but time, the sound of the butterfly and the hum of the bees; but in winter it is cold and lonely enough.

At the best time there is nobody there but the wind, and the wind is not there. It is a sad thing, and I think that the wind is not there. It is a sad thing, and I think that the wind is not there. It is a sad thing, and I think that the wind is not there.

...meaning between my wife's neat little bedchamber and a pile of straw glowing even in that awful moonlight. I remember the sense of contrast and incongruity struck me almost as forcibly as the presence of the boots themselves, and they astounded and alarmed me as much as the sight of the famous footprints did Robinson Crusoe, and for precisely the same reason. The boots and the pile were nothing in themselves, but my intelligence, now fully aroused, set me flashing to the conclusion that somebody must have been there to have left them, and was probably in the neighborhood, and indeed under my roof, at that very moment. If you give Professor Owen a foot of any creature (just as of less scientific persons we say: Give them an inch, they will take an ell, he will build up the wall farthest out of his nose head; and something of the Professor's marvelous instinct was on this occasion mine. I pictured to myself (and as it turned out, correctly) a monster more than six feet high, broad in the shoulders, heavy in the jaw, with legs like stone balustrades, and hands, but too often clenched, of the size of pumpkins.
The vestibule led into the pantry, where I found not this giant, but a stout fellow, or half a man, I should conclude the chief part of our plate to be, whereas it was lying—unless he had already taken it (a terrible thought that flashed through my mind, followed by a cluster of others, like a comet with its tail)—under our bed.

Of course I could have gone into the pantry at once; but I felt averse to be seen there; perhaps, upon finding nothing of the sort, I might have been asked reunions for what he had done and go away. "It would be a wicked thing to deprive him of the opportunity of repentance." Moreover, it struck me that he might not be a thief at all, but only a cousin (considerably "removed") of one of the maid servants. It would have been very wrong of her to let him into the house, such an hour, but it was just possible that she had done so, and that he was at that moment supping in the kitchen upon certain cold grouse which I knew were in the larder. Such a state of things, I repeat, would have been reprehensible, but I most sincerely hoped that it had occurred. A clandestine attachment, however misnamed, is better than burglary with possible violence.
Coughing rather loudly, to give the gentleman notice that I was about, and to suggest that he had better take himself off in my temporary absence, I went up to the attic to make inquiries.

And here I am tempted to a digression concerning the excessive somnolency of female domesticity. As regards our own at least, they reminded me, except in name, of the Seven Sleepers. I knocked at their door about a quarter of an hour before attracting their attention, and took me another quarter to convince them (through the keyhole) that it was not fire. If it had been, they must all have been burnt in their beds. Believed from this point they were scarcely less sensible than you are of the same circumstances, and with that, they were all asleep.

"Though he looked exceedingly well," I felt grateful to him for going so near his bed, just retired to his chamber."
"Were you moved to compassion?"
"I came here?" I said. "Are you hungry?"
"Not now," he answered with a yawn.
Of course he was intimating that he had supped at my expense, and at times thought it frank of him to knowledge it. If I had known then, I learnt afterward, that he had eaten grouse and a half and the whole contents of a large jar of Devonshire cream with himself, just received from a preserver should have thought it more impudent of me to have asked him to go to bed.
I did think it rather impudent when I said, as he stood at the front door, that I had opened for his exit:
"Won't you give me half a crown, to put me in an honest way of business?" But nevertheless, thinking it better to part good friends, I gave him what he asked for. He spit upon the cob-"Track," as he was good enough to explain it, as a substitute for a tobacco pipe, thinks, since he omitted to give me a and slouched down the gravel walk out of the gate.

It was 3 o'clock, the mist had begun to clear, and the moon and stars were shining. A sort of holy calm began to permeate me. I felt that I had done good action and also got rid of a very disagreeable individual, and that it was high time that I should go to bed in peace with all my wits, belongings, and and been rescued by the servants, was the tip-toe of expectation to hear all that had taken place, and of course I had told her. I described each thrilling incident with such dramatic force that she avowed that nothing would ever induce her in my absence to sleep at the hotel again. This was just what I had planned for a while, and I congratulated myself on my narrative with which I had been so abundantly indulged myself, but —I was indulged myself, but I was very unfortunate. — Now, and I was very detained in time, after dining at the club, by circumstances over which I have no control (such as a rubber at which will sometimes stretch like India rubber) and hitherto I had only to inquire in the afternoon whether I had not been the cause of any trouble, and gret that there was a possibility of my non-return. Here was an end of all unless I could reassure her. I therefore began to dwell on the unlikelihood of a second burglar ever visiting house, which I compared with that of a mouse hole made by a cannon ball, to be a place of security from can-balls for evermore.

"Oh, don't worry me," cried my wife with a just trace of impatient irritation in her voice. "Hark! goodness gracious, what is that coming along the road?" She thought it was the burglar, and horns back; whereas, if I may so explain, it was the very contrary—namely a horse patrol.

"Look out at the window," said him I insist upon your going to bed," he claimed. I had no alternative, as he said "insist" (as my married friends will understand), but to accede to wisdom: so I went out and told the truth what had happened.

"How long was the fellow he stayed?" he inquired.

"More than an hour. He is quite a good fellow, and very intelligent."

"How long was he there?"
